NEWTON CLUB NOTES.

CALENDAR.

Wednesday evening, Feb. 7th, Assembly.

The last of a series of Symphony concerts at the Newton Club this winter was one long to be remembered by those who eagerly crowded the Assembly hall to add an impetus to the many bursts of applause, which greeted Mr. Franz Kneisel and the inimitable orchestra, with Mr. Alwin Schroeder and Mons. Ch. Mole as soloists.

As usual Mr. Schroeder's cello gave forth those tones of infinite purity and sweetness, the noblest and most touching, which can not be described except as "Schroederic."

Mons. Mole, who for the first time has favored the club with his presence, won unadorned expressions of pleasure, after rendering a solo from that most difficult of all wind instruments, the flute. No one would think while hearing that instrument so perfectly and rarely mastered by Mons. Mole that it was one of such small compass upon which only a great artist could soar aloft. The exquisite rendering of the "Tremolo" seemed to exhibit, not only the skill of the player, but the capacity of the instrument.

The entire concert was one of greatest enjoyment throughout to all music lovers, being the nearest approach to perfection of any heretofore.

Monday Night's Concert.

The concert at Eliot Hall next Monday night promises to be one of the social events of the winter. No pains have been spared to make the hall attractive, and the stage is to be handsomely decorated by the kindness of R. H. Stearns & Co. Several other firms will contribute to the decoration of the hall itself, and the result will be a pleasant surprise to those familiar with the hall.

A number of Newton young men will act as ushers, so that there may be no confusion about seating the audience.

As before stated the concert is for the benefit of the poor children of Newton and Mrs. Cutler has spared no pains to make it a success. From present appearances, the hall will be filled with citizens who have generously responded to the call for tickets.

The program prepared is an excellent one and naturally the chief attraction will be Mrs. Cutler, whose beautiful voice has not been heard in public since she came to live in Newton, and she will be sure of a hearty welcome from a Newton audience. The pianist, Miss Andrews, is a recent comer to Newton, but has a high reputation as a musician. Mr. Myron Whitney, Jr., has a voice that is said to equal his famous father's at his age, and Mr. Dunham, the leader of the Eliot choir, is too well known and too popular a singer to need any commendation.

Mr. Willis Nowell is one of the most brilliant players in this vicinity, and with so many attractions those who attend will not only hear a concert of unusual excellence, but will aid in a very worthy object. Those who wish reserved seats can secure them at Hubbard's drug store.

N. A. A. Meet.

The Newton Athletic Association indoor games Saturday at 8 o'clock promises to draw a large crowd of ladies and gentlemen from all the Newtons. The interest both sexes have taken in all meetings of this newly formed club is very gratifying to the governing committee.

A large number of entries for Saturday is reported, and the competition in running and the six bouts in boxing promises to be very lively. As this is the first indoor meeting of the association, members who have entered are particularly requested to come to the scratch in order to make the games a success.

Lent Services in Grace Church.

Commencing Ash Wednesday, Feb. 7th, services will be held every Wednesday evening at 7.30, every Friday evening at 7.30 and on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 4.30 in the afternoon. The Rev. John Matteson of Auburndale will conduct the Friday services. The seats are free to all persons at all these Lenten services.

Mr. Gargan, is not only a natural orator, but a man of deep erudition and rare culture, as was fully exemplified at Chicago, on Catholic Education Day, where he represented the laity of Massachusetts, and delivered one of the most eloquent and polished addresses of the memorable occasion. The subject of the lecture is a timely topic, and will doubtless attract a large audience of our Catholic fellow-citizens, as well as many non-Catholics, who will, we predict, be richly repaid for their attendance.

A Card.

West Newton, Jan. 29, 1894.

To the Editor of the Gazette:

I desire, through your columns, to express my gratitude to the Newton fire department for its prompt response to the alarm of fire from my house recently, and for its very effective work in quickly extinguishing it. I desire also to thank the members of the police force who kindly kept guard over my premises until their services were no longer needed.

My warm thanks are also due to the many kind friends and neighbors who volunteered their aid in removing from my house whatever was liable to destruction.

Chandler's & Co.'s Great Sale.

Chandler & Co. announce their seventh annual mark-down sale, which will be interesting reading for the ladies of Newton, who know the reliable character of the goods kept by this firm. Two columns of our first page are devoted to enumerating a portion of the bargains that will be offered, and the sale begins next Monday. They have a very extensive and attractive stock, and the prices speak for themselves. Their store on Winter street, Boston, will be a great resort for bargain hunters next week.

The Pomroy Home.

The directors of the Pomroy Home, most gratefully acknowledge the many expressions of sympathy and generous aid of friends of the Home called out by the sickness and death of the late superintendent, Miss Elizabeth Robbins. In the confusion incident to such a trying time, some names may have been overlooked. Therefore it seems necessary to make this public recognition.

Tremont Theatre.

Mr. James T. Powers in "Walker-London," by J. M. Barrie, is the attraction at the Tremont Theatre next week. The story of "Walker-London," is founded on the play author's well-known novel "When a Man's Single." While there may be some parts, more of the unique and individual humor in some others of Mr. Barrie's novels, none of the works which have made this author famous, is better taken "all round" than the source of "Walker-London."

We have accounts from all directions giving almost unqualified praise for Mr. Powers' efforts in this play. It appears that he has an assumption which allows of a vast amount of fun, and is, at the same time, exceedingly clever in character development. Mr. Powers has an admirable company with him by all accounts. The chief scene of the play is placed upon "A House Boat," something Americans read about often enough, but generally speaking, have no personal knowledge of. There is a large fund of fun gathered for patrons of the Tremont the week of Mr. Powers' engagement.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE ALDERMEN HAD A SHORT SESSION TUESDAY EVENING.

The mayor and aldermen met Tuesday evening with Aldermen Thompson and Hamilton absent.

The reports of the overseers of the poor and of the city marshal were received and placed on file.

Alderman Bothfield presented the petition of the Newton Athletic Association for permission to hold a sparring and fencing exhibition at Eliot hall, Feb. 3. Granted.

An acceptance of the location granted them for underground conduits in Washington and Chestnut streets was received from the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co.

Alderman Bothfield presented an order which passed, requesting the authority to petition the general court for authority for the city to extend the time issue of boulevard bonds or for widening, deepening and straightening water courses from 20 to 30 years.

L. E. Leland and others petitioned that Otis street near Hillside and Chestnut streets be straightened and widened to a uniform width of 45 feet; that the street corners be rounded, the abutments adjoining to give the land also that two surface drain pipes on Otis street be discontinued. Referred.

An order was passed authorizing the committee on sewers to sell and dispose of waste matter, the highway department being given first preference, the proceeds to be paid to the city treasurer and credited to the sewer construction account.

A petition from the Silver Lake Co. and others for crosswalk on Watertown near Nevada street was referred.

The board then adjourned upstairs to attend the grade crossing hearing.

NURSE'S NEW HOME.

A PARTIAL DESCRIPTION OF A MAGNIFICENT GIFT.

The new Nurses Home just completed on the grounds of the Newton Hospital at Woodland is without doubt, the largest, most complete and most beautiful and healthfully situated building constructed in this country for the training of nurses.

The building is completed, is now being furnished and on Feb. 14, will be dedicated with services of a formal and impressive character.

The home is situated on high ground a little to the rear of the present hospital building with an extended view of country seen on all sides.

It is a three story wooden building in the old colonial style of architecture from plans prepared by Hartwell & Richardson who designed the famous clubhouse of the Newton Club. The ground floor contains a large parlor and two large connecting rooms, the latter to be utilized for lectures by members of the medical staff.

The second and third floor contain both double and single dormitories which will amply accommodate forty nurses. The dormitories are all furnished in a thorough and first-class manner, those for the older nurses being a little the best.

The parlor and an adjoining room have been set apart for the Palmer memorial rooms, and the furnishings of these apartments is being done by the Newton Hospital Aid Association, composed of Newton ladies interested in the hospital work. Mrs. Palmer was matron of the hospital from its start until her death two years since. The association had started a Palmer memorial fund with the intention of erecting a memorial building on the hospital grounds, but the $6000 in the fund it was decided at the annual meeting to devote to furnishing a room to be kept in Mrs. Palmer's memory in the nurses home.

The interior finish of the home is in light wood and colors with which the furnishings will harmonize, open fire places are in the larger rooms, the idea being to make it as cheerful and home like as possible. The whole building is heated by steam from the central power house which supplies all the buildings, and the home will be connected with the main hospital by a covered way. In the spring the grounds about the home will be artistically laid out with trees, shrubs and flowers.

The cost of the home is about $20,000, exclusive of furnishings, and it is the gift of Lucius G. Pratt of West Newton and the late Edmund W. Converse of Newton.

The dedication exercises will take place on Wednesday, Feb. 14 at 3:30 p. m. Addresses will be made by Robert P. Loring, M. D., of Newton Centre and Rev. J. C. Jaynes of West Newton. The keys will be delivered by Mr. L. G. Pratt, one of the donors of the home, to President Joseph R. Leeson of the executive committee of the hospital. A large orchestra will render selections and other interesting features, not yet matured, will be included in the final program.

N. H. S. '89, Reunion.

The fifth annual reunion of the class of '89, Newton High School, was held on Wednesday evening, January 24th, at the Newton Boat Clubhouse, Riverside.

The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Misses Margaret S. Wallace, Clara E. Shepard, Constantia W. Smith and Messrs. Albert W. Little, Francis J. Burrage and Frank H. Morehouse.

There was quite a large gathering, considering the fact that the class graduated nearly five years ago, and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present.

The boat house offers excellent opportunities for bowling and dancing and the good time continued until a late hour. Refreshments were served by Barlow of Newtonville.

Among those present were Misses Helen G. Eager, Margaret S. Wallace, Constantia W. Smith, Isabel N. Cole, Edith Kimball, Mary W. Morton, Messrs. Frank H. Morehouse, Wm. F. Warner, Wm. S. Mendall, Edmund E. Blake, Arthur E. Fowle, Edw. E. Hills, Chas. B. Fleming, Albert W. Little, Francis J. Burrage, Carleton W. Jenkins, Wm. F. Heckman, Walter E. Noble and Luther G. Paul.

At the class meeting held during the latter part of the evening the following officers were re-elected: Albert W. Little, president; Francis J. Burrage, secretary; Misses Margaret S. Wallace, Constantia W. Smith, Clara E. Shepard and Frank H. Morehouse, committee. It was voted to have a reunion next year.

AN INTERESTING QUESTION.

CONFESSION IS NOT CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE OF GUILT.

Dr. Robert A. Reid has an interesting paper in the Massachusetts Medical Journal under the above title, in which he considers the improbability that Louis Wright told the truth when he confessed to having set the Lincoln street fire. Being irresponsible, his testimony can have but little weight, unless corroborated by other witnesses.

The article states: Last autumn Louis Wright of Newton was arrested, charged with having made several attempts to burn a large building in Boston in which he had been employed. He confessed his guilt, but the judge, after investigating the past history of the boy, and considering how utterly without purpose, or method, or hope of personal gain, this, and other crimes which he had committed were, consigned him to an insane asylum as one wholly irresponsible. Some weeks since a sensational article appeared in a Boston newspaper to the effect that a prominent official of the Boston Fire Department had visited young Wright at the Asylum, and obtained from him a confession that he had also set the so-called "Lincoln Street Fire." Is such a confession, even if obtained, to be believed? It was obtained by a shrewd official of a department which had been charged with incompetency, and severely criticized by the press for its alleged mismanagement of several large fires. It was obtained from a person who had been adjudged insane, and whose evidence would not be accepted against another. Why then should it be received when given against himself? I believe it should not be.

It is a very wide-spread opinion that the confession of a person accused of an offense is the best possible evidence of his guilt—an opinion not only entertained by the community at large, but also held by common and statute law, and enforced by numerous judicial decisions. Copious extracts from legal writers could be quoted in proof of this statement.

It is now, however, a well recognized principle that a confession, to be of any legal value, must be made without constraint, and without any promise of reward or immunity. But this is a modern refinement. It is not long since supposed criminals were tortured to extort confession; and even now how often do we see a parent, or master, resorting to torture in one form or other to wring a confession from child or servant.

The existing laws on this subject seem to be based on the principle that a man's eagerness to preserve life, liberty, or property, is so overpowering that he is not likely, if innocent, to say anything to jeopardize any of these; and that, consequently, if he does confess to any crime whose punishment he knows to be death, mutilation, imprisonment, forfeiture of estate, he must be speaking the truth. But a glance at criminal history proves it to have been no uncommon thing for persons to confess to offenses of which they were either certainly or probably innocent, and proves that there are often forces operating in the mind which impel to a false confession, even though life, liberty, or property, be thereby endangered. Look at the thousands who, confessed to being witches and holding converse with the devil, although they knew that their confession was consigning them to torture or death. Look at the numbers who, in times of great public excitement about any crime, confess to it, and proclaim themselves the criminals, when the slightest investigation proves them liars. Look at the numbers who have confessed to crime, for the sake of shielding the really guilty from punishment. Again, look at the cases, so often met with by physicians, where the false confession of some heinous crime is the first observed evidence of mental derangement.

A somewhat striking case happened in Maine some years ago. A man was suddenly missing, and there were strong suspicions of foul play. Two men came forward, confessed to having murdered him, and were about to be hung for it, when their supposed victim turned up alive.

A brother, who was an attorney, informed me that one of the things most surprising to the young law-student was to learn the insufficiency of confession, in many cases, as evidence of guilt. It is indispensable that it be made without promise or expectation of reward, or of favor; this is, I believe, the doctrine now held by the courts. An innocent man is charged with a crime; popular feeling is strongly against him; he is poor, sees all his prospects blighted, and knows not which way to turn. Some friend whispers that if he will only confess, influence may be brought to bear to clear him; and too often he yields to the temptation. There are numerous cases on record of confession simply for the sake of notoriety—for the name of being a great criminal. Every one knew how anxious were the friends of the Artful Dodger that he should have a good record at Newgate. Not less frequent are the instances of confession to save a friend. In one case which I recall a man confessed to a murder in order to give the real criminal time to flee the country. When his trial came on he easily proved an alibi. It was very probable that Constance Kent was moved to confession by her sympathies, to restore her father's ruined reputation.

There are probably two principles controlling the mind of the criminal—that of self-preservation, and that of remorse,—the former leading to concealment, the latter to confession. Undoubtedly it is the rule that a criminal's first feeling, after his crime, is fear of the law; and the cases where confession had been instigated by remorse alone, must be rare exceptions. Indeed, so firmly implanted is the instinct of self-preservation, that voluntary confession of a serious crime, such as Louis Wright's, carries on the face of it strong doubt either of the boy's truthfulness, or of his sanity. The motives prompting to confession are sometimes very curious. It was said that a poor man from the country gave himself up as the murderer of Mr. Nathan who was murdered in New York some years ago, in order to get free transportation to the city, to see his friends—knowing that he could then prove his innocence.

"Smoker" at the Newton Boat Club.

The "Crew" of the "Wawbewaw," together with many local canoeists, spent a most pleasant evening at the Newton Boat Clubhouse, Riverside, on Thursday, Jan. 25th, the occasion being the second "Smoker" given under the auspices of the owners of the famous "War Canoe."

The first object of interest was an exciting bowling match between two teams selected from the number of canoe enthusiasts. Considering the length of the alleys, the scores made were very good, Messrs. George Smith and Apollonio doing particularly fine work.

There was plenty of musical talent on hand and all the selections were much appreciated. Messrs. Hoffman, Hines and Suow made a very pleasing "combination" with the piano, harmonica, banjo and mandolin.

Refreshments were served during the evening and everybody had a good time. Among the canoeists present were Messrs. Raymond Apollonio of the Shush-gah Canoe Club of Winchester, Fred P. Smith of the Dedham Boat Club, A. S. Mitchell of the Boston Canoe Club, Fred H. Loveland, Louis A. Hall, Edw. G. Blaisdell, Waldo L. Plimpton of the Newton Boat Club and Louis F. Hoffman, A. H. Coolidge, Jos. L. Clapp, Frank Snow, Roy Hines, Chas. Robertson, Leland, Chandler, besides the "Crew" which consists of the following men: Louis S. Drake, Geo. B. Smith, John F. Linder, Francis J. Burrage, Quincy Pond, Wm. V. Forsaith, Russell A. Ballou, Jr., Chester A. Howe, Jas. H. Low, Chas. W. Knapp and Julius B. Waterbury.

Information Wanted.

The proprietors of the Stanley Dry Plate Company, Messrs. F. E. & F. O. Stanley of Newton, informs us that they are anxious to communicate with the 'foreigner who pays the duty,' says the Boston Herald. They are about importing a lot of glass, and if any of the high tariff friends of the Herald will put them in communication with that much-mentioned personage, they desire us to state that it will be considered a great favor. Indeed, they would doubtless be willing to make it a "cash consideration," in view of the fact that it is now costing them some $600 a month for duties on glass. Another firm of glass importers of this city, who have read in one of our high tariff contemporaries that the cost of freightage between here and Europe is scarcely greater than that of the freightage from one point to another in the vicinity of Boston, would like more specific information as to where such rates are to be obtained on the ocean. They fear they are paying much too high prices if the facilities asserted can be found elsewhere.

DEPRESSION STRONGLY FAVORED.

THE GRADE CROSSING HEARING WAS UNANIMOUS AGAINST ELEVATING THE TRACKS OF THE BOSTON & ALBANY.

The hearing at the City Hall, West Newton, on Tuesday evening was largely attended, considering the unfavorable weather, some 100 citizens being present and according to the opinions there expressed, there is no better method of separating the deadly grades of the Boston & Albany railroad through this city, than by depressing them in an open subway with sloping banks.

The mayor called the assemblage to order at 7:45 and opened the hearing. Aldermen Roffe, Bothfeld, Plummer and Rumery occupied seats on the platform, Alderman Hunt preferring to sit with the audience of one hundred persons. The two absent members of the board were detained, one by an accident, the other being out of the city.

The mayor stated the object of the meeting and read the petition submitted by the North Side Improvement Society asking for the hearing.

President C. D. Cabot of the society spoke as its representative and presented a list of speakers. He outlined the objects of the society and said they had recently become interested in the grade separation question which was of paramount interest to the citizens of Newton. He hoped the mayor and aldermen would consider the matter very carefully before coming to a decision.

Mr. Jesse C. Ivy was the first speaker on the list submitted, and made a strong argument in favor of depressing the tracks. He was introduced as representing the society but disclaimed that distinction. He did not represent them in any particular since, he was not retained by them or anyone else. He lived on the north side and appeared as a citizen of Newton.

There are people living in the city today, who have seen the Boston & Albany grow from one track to four, have seen its growth from a widely scattered town to a thickly settled community, and it is their failure at that time to realize the future growth of the city and prepare for it that has necessitated an agitation of this question.

Therefore a failure on the part of the people or city government to properly solve the question wisely will entail more and more trouble in the future to the city and community.

The prime question to be considered is what is for the best interests of the city. Not for day, but for all the years to come. There are those here in this hall, who may see Newton increase to a population of 75,000 people. It is not a question of ways and means. Whether for elevation or depression, the decision should be in the interests solely of the city.

Reference was here made to the work of the State commission appointed in 1889. They recommended after surveying through Newton that the B. & A. tracks be depressed 18 feet for a portion of the distance and raised 12 feet for the remainder. This was reported which provided for depression at these depths. Washington street crossing, Centre street and Walnut street crossings, 16 feet. From Walnut street west, elevation was recommended.

The speaker called special attention to the fact that those expert engineers considered the question and substantially recommended that the tracks be depressed.

The expert commission appointed by the city proposed two plans; elevation and depression. Both these commissions are on record as showing that depression is entirely feasible. Therefore any misconception on that point should not be entertained.

Elevation and depression both being feasible, what is the relative cost of construction? The State commission placed the cost at $1,500,000.

The commission of 1893 appointed by the city, gave the cost by elevation as $125,000 less than by depression.

But as far as $125,000 or a quarter million of dollars is concerned it ought not to influence a decision if it is not to be for the best interests of the city of Newton.

Regarding the head room necessary in a subway, the railroad claim that 16 feet is needed. In Boston they have bridges with only 14 feet 4 inches head room. If that is sufficient in Boston why not in Newton, and a difference of one or two feet in excavation would make a material difference in the cost.

The two plans under consideration are far from one and the same thing for the B. & A. road; where they pay 45 per cent of the cost of construction, it is natural they should favor the least expensive plan.

And when by filling as would be necessary in elevation, they can get a profit out of their work by charging regular rates, excavating for depression would be much more expensive and they would get no profit.

Trains in an open subway with sloping grass banks would be infinitely superior to an elevated way. The depots would be more accessible and one half the time, now consumed by stopping at the stations could be saved by having platforms level with those of the cars. Again an elevated structure would need two stations, whereas only one would be necessary in depression.

A wall through the city 18 feet high would be a constant infliction on family, neighbor and friends. The average business man would be only slightly inconvenienced.

Not one real estate expert had been found who did not believe elevation would make property depreciate 1000 to 1500 feet each side of the tracks. On the other hand depression would tend to improve rather than injure property.

Elevated tracks are more dangerous as is acknowledged by the railroad commission in passing a law that trains shall give signals before passing over bridges.

The railroad has been keeping in touch with the legislature ever since this matter has agitated Newton.

The city should appoint a commission of three persons to get the assent of the railroad commissioner to separate the grades. Their consent can be obtained as the grades must be changed whether elevated or depressed. Application can then be made to the Superior Court and the citizens will be in a position to get what they desire. Whatever the commission may think the Superior court has power to enforce, even against the wishes of the Boston & Albany railroad.

Mr. F. A. Dewson was much interested in depression. It was the most important question that had ever come before the city of Newton. The whole future of the city as a residential place hinged on a wise decision of this matter. Washington street was once the residence of the best people of Newton, but the proximity of the railroad with its increased lines of tracks and attendant business had driven many of them away. Elevation would still more injure while a subway would improve those sections. He spoke of Edinborough, Scotland, where the railroad ran through the heart of the city through a subway along the border of which a system of parks was maintained and fine residences were built. No insurmountable difficulty was there found in taking care of the drainage although Edinborough was in a much colder climate and used to more severe storms than Newton.

He had the assurance of the city engineer that all difficulties could be entirely overcome even if the underlying conditions were much greater. He wanted depression if it cost a half million more than the elevated way.

An elevated road bed would be a monument of the folly of the city government that did not oppose it.

When the question goes before the commissioners, whether favored by the aldermen or not it will be opposed by the citizens to the utmost. They will fight it to the very extreme to have their wishes carried out despite the desires of the railroad. He spoke as a railroad man and a stockholder of the B. & A. road. It was the duty of the city government to stand first and foremost for the interests of the city of Newton, despite what the Boston & Albany or any other railroad wants.

Mr. James T. Allen had been a resident of Newton for 30 years. He believed the interests of Newton and the railroad corporation were identical. He called attention to the time when citizens were aroused to action by the incessant whistling of trains passing through the city, making them an intolerable nuisance. And he believed if the citizens today demanded depression of the tracks they would succeed. He referred to the "anaconda" like shape of the proposed elevated road with changing grade at Bellevue street and by the road.

The elevation of the tracks would not only disfigure the city, but would divide it into two separate communities, with separate interests. The mayor submitted a communication from Hon. Alden Spears of Ward Six, in which he favored elevating the tracks. Rev. G. W. Shuman, D. D., reviewed the history of the grade separation in a very comprehensive manner.

The first plan favored by people generally was depression. They were then assured that owing to some great engineering feat impossible of accomplishment in this 19th century, or to some peculiar geological construction of the city of Newton, it was impossible to entertain that plan, and it was reluctantly abandoned.

They were then told they must have an embankment on which the trains were to run 18 feet above the country. And after that a gleam of hope was seen in the relocation plan proposed by Mr. Langford, the man who stirs up odd things. His plan found instant favor and many are not convinced yet, that it is not the best plan.

But they were impressed with the idea that it would be very costly and that the road would never do it. Now the plan of depression is shown to be feasible and pleasant. The citizens at this meeting, continued the speaker, are not here as obstructionists, but we are citizens appearing here in the interests of the city, because Newton is our home.

There are depressed tracks entering Philadelphia which are far from unpleasant and with the sloping banks as proposed, there could be no good objection to depression. Mr. Austin R. Mitchell asserted that if the tracks were elevated the decrease in the value of property within 2000 feet of the elevation would be in his opinion 25 per cent, while the value of the same property would be correspondingly increased if the tracks were depressed.

Mr. Andrew S. March appeared not as one owning property which would be affected, but because the city of Newton was his home. He did not believe it should be the policy of the city government to see how much money they could save the Boston & Albany railroad. Although the latter should be treated with "due consideration and very tenderly."

An open subway was far preferable and the view from the windows of grass banks and the noise of passing trains on an elevated structure would be more objectionable than were the tracks run through an excavation. The depression would benefit real estate; the elevation would injure it. Elevation would give people passing through the city the impression that the country was low and undesirable as a place of residence.

Ex-Alderman George M. Fiske said everyone knew the noise of passing trains on an elevated structure would be more objectionable than were the tracks run through an excavation. The depression would benefit real estate; the elevation would injure it. Elevation would give people passing through the city the impression that the country was low and undesirable as a place of residence.

Ex-Alderman N. H. Chadwick thought an open subway was the only practical scheme. He believed that many would prefer to have the tracks remain as at present than to submit to the proposed elevation. A prominent gentleman residing in Ward Six, whose influence would carry as great weight as that of Mr. Spears, when he believed to be under a misapprehension, said to him: "If you people submit to having the tracks elevated you will be the laughing stock of the whole state, don't do it."

Mr. John T. Langford had deeply considered the subject with a view to perfect impartiality, from both the standpoint of the city and that of the railroad. For the railroad he favored elevation, for the city, depression.

The report of the commission gives a very good aggregate cost on lines there shown. The cost by the "toboggan plan" (as he styled that with the heavy grades at Bellevue street) is estimated at $1,900,000. Depression will cost $2,000,000, making a difference of $125,000. Without the "toboggan" this difference would be modified.

The Boston & Albany claim these figures are incorrect and that depression will cost an additional $500,000. This makes the cost of depression according to the Boston & Albany folks about $2,500,000.

The city engineer in 1889, with a much more expensive plan, makes the cost only $1,500,000. Where is this difference of $1,000,000? This should be decided before the city goes farther. There is also a difference of $500,000 between the figures submitted in 1889 and those by the commission of 1892. The damages for taking land for depression is placed at $250,000, for elevation $120,000. The base of an 18 ft elevated structure would necessarily cover more land than the opening of a 16 ft subway, which would make these figures erroneous. Estimate the cost of depression $45,000 less. The figure of cost for depression are based on 10 ft. head room. All the city of Boston requires is 15 ft. and one foot less of excavation will reduce the cost more than one sixteenth or $150,000. This places the figures for depression reduced to $1,700,000 against elevation, by the "toboggan" plan $1,900,000.

Regarding the "toboggan" plan the engineers failed to present figures for stone arch bridges as ordered by the mayor and aldermen, which would greatly increase the total cost.

The speaker guaranteed that a plan with stone arch bridges as the commission were instructed to report would cost 25 per cent more than the proposed depression. He submitted a letter from Geo. F. Kimball, chairman of the state commission of 1889, showing that excavation could be done by using two tracks at a time. The N. Y., N. H. & H. were now engaged on work similar to that proposed in Newton, and traffic was carried on as usual. A real estate man had said if depression cost $1,000,000 more it was cheaper than elevation.

Mr. J. E. Hall favored the proposed depression. The erection of an unsightly wall in the centre of the city would greatly injure real estate, and would work a grave injury and wrong to citizens living near the Albany road.

Dr. D. E. Baker thought the time had gone by for the interest of one corporation to decide a matter like this. He believed a compromise plan could be adopted to advantage.

Mr. E. W. Gay believed the elevation of the tracks would result in great damage to surrounding property, and would be a great disfigurement to the city. The hearing adjourned at 10:15 o'clock.

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarum, Bastrop, Tex.

The Comedy Club gave their theatricals to a large audience in Village Hall last Friday evening. The selections by the orchestra were excellently rendered and added greatly to the enjoyment of those present. "Sarah's Young Man," a farce in three acts was then given by Misses Seaver, Locke, Mrs. Armstrong, Messrs. Heymer, R. Seaver and O. Seaver. The piece was full of pretty predicaments, and the action was very good. The tragedy "Sam's Courtship" did not meet with success as the former, the great hit being Mr. Rob Seaver as Caesar. Humorousities by Mr. Chas. Maynard and Xylophone solos by Mr. Fred H. Hobart, which were given between the plays, came in for a large share of the applause. The proceeds were for the benefit of the Waban Improvement Society. The program in full was as follows:

DEPRESSING THE TRACKS.

The hearing on the plan for depressing the tracks, at City Hall, Tuesday evening, was attended by about one hundred people, the storm keeping many at home, who would have gone either out of curiosity or because they really believed that depression was the only way to solve the problem.

The speakers set forth their side of the case as forcibly as possible, and made a very strong case for that side. It might be charged that they only paid attention to one side of the case, but that is what they were there for. Some of the statements would hardly bear examination, as for instance one speaker argued that with elevated tracks two stations would be needed for local traffic, one on each side of the tracks, the express tracks occupying the centre. With depressed tracks only one station would be needed, as the tracks could remain as they are, and by building the depot platform up three feet, passengers could walk direct from the car platform, and so save time. He did not explain how the platform could be extended to the second track.

Another speaker referred to the impossibility of building a slope that would stay in position if the tracks were elevated, but if they were depressed the slopes could be made very attractive, which is certainly curious.

Another speaker said the stone arches were given up because they would add to the cost of elevating, and this made the expense of the two systems more nearly equal, where the fact is the stone arches were given up because it would be difficult to contrive an arch over a wide street like Walnut street, for instance, which would be only 14 feet in its highest point, and leave room for sidewalks at each side; or for streets like Centre, Church and Washington, which cross at an oblique angle.

There was a good deal said also about the trouble of climbing up to the elevated tracks, but nothing about the trouble of climbing down to the depressed tracks, although one would doubtless offset the other.

Then there was objection made to the variation in grade from 2 to 18 feet through the city, by the elevated plan, which one speaker thought would make passengers seasick, although as a matter of fact, there are about as great variations as that in the tracks as they are at present, the difference between Faneuil and Newton being 22 feet, the rise continuing to Bellevue street bridge, and then dropping a little, when it again rises to Newtonville, and then drops again towards West Newton, and again rises 11 feet between that point and Auburndale. As the engineers stated at the time the elevated plan was brought out, the variations in grade would be about the same as at present, the conditions at Bellevue street being simply reversed.

A good deal was said about the monstrous embankment, which would completely divide the city, so that people on one side could not see anything on the other side, when the fact is the embankment would be little if any above the high board fence that now lines each side of the track and is not regarded as a very monstrous obstruction.

A good many of the arguments used against elevation, and of those in favor of depression, will not bear investigation, but there were many sound arguments advanced, one of which was the damage an elevated structure would do to Washington street, making it unsafe for driving and undesirable for residences. It is clear that depression would be an advantage here.

The remonstrants would have made their case stronger, if they had had some engineer present to explain how a "subway" as they were fond of calling it, 16 feet in depth, could be drained, when in digging for sewers on Church street an unfailing supply of running water was found at a depth of 10 feet, or how, by discontinuing two of the tracks, the ledges could be blasted out, without disturbing the other two, and interfering with the traffic of the road.

The damage to adjacent property was dwelt upon, but no one said anything about the damages, if the tracks were sunk only 10 feet, as some proposed and the streets graded up 8 feet. The owners of the business blocks in Newton and Newtonville, and all who had to climb these bridges, might object to such a plan, and think it even worse than elevating the tracks and not disturbing the grades of the streets.

As for the expense of the two plans, that is for the railroad to consider, and the figures so far presented are more or less guess work. The aldermen can well leave the expense altogether out of account, in their considerations. They will have sufficient to do in eliminating real from imaginary objections, and in considering what they can get.

The wisest plan would be to apply at once for a commission to decide the question, as we understand that it is only when a commission is called in that the state will pay its full proportion of the cost. Then the commission can hear all who want to be heard, reach a final decision, and have this much vexed question settled.

The commission can take expert testimony on all the engineering problems involved, and find out just what can and what cannot be done. There is no use of getting excited about the question, or holding more meetings till the experts have been heard from.

None of the speakers explained, however, how the railroad could be compelled to follow any plan of which they did not approve. There is always the policy of delay, of having so much work elsewhere that Newton would have to wait, and so having the present condition of things continued indefinitely.

Indeed it is the opinion of some that the railroad does not want to do anything in Newton, on account of the great expense involved, and that they are very much pleased to see some new scheme broached just when the city government seems likely to come to an agreement with them, and the whole thing put back indefinitely. As long as a difference of opinion can be kept up, the work can be put off, and a large amount of interest money saved to the company.

THE CENTRAL BOULEVARD.

There is a good deal of curiosity concerning the location of the Central Boulevard in West Newton, and the people who are directly interested in the several schemes proposed think the time has come when something definite should be done. Such questions should not be decided hastily, but the aldermen would not have been liable to such an accusation if they had given a decision some weeks ago.

The evidence brought out at the several hearings, and the weightier arguments seem to be in favor of the north side route in the judgment of many disinterested parties, and the men at the back of this route comprise a number of the most prominent citizens of Newton, whose public spirit has been evidenced on many occasions. Their opinions are certainly entitled to respectful consideration, and it is to be hoped that this important question will soon be decided.

There comes a time when the people weary of talk and look for some action to be taken on matters which have been long under discussion.

One strong argument in favor of prompt action in separating the grades, is the vexatious delays at the street crossings while waiting for long freight trains to pass. If a fire should happen to break out on the south side in Newton, for instance, many valuable minutes might be lost before the steamer could cross the tracks. Five minutes is the usual time a team has to wait, every time the driver wishes to get across and not unfrequently it is much longer, as the gates have to be kept down for several trains.

The petition to give the Mayor power to appoint a park and boulevard commission was presented in the legislature this week.

Corey Hill Carnival.

The "carnival" held by the Corey Hill Toboggan Club, Wednesday night, was a brilliant success and attracted a great crowd of people. The club house was filled with members and their guests, many of whom were ladies, and the platform overflowed with those watching the "sliding" of the toboggans down the slide, or waiting to take their turn. A large number of sleighing parties waited in the vicinity of the clubhouse to witness the fireworks. The club succeeded in making a gorgeous spectacle. The clubhouse and the incline from the roof was radiant with red. At the foot of the incline the space around was beautiful in blue; further along came a white light, and at the end was another blue light. The fireworks, while not elaborate, were pretty, and greatly enhanced the effect. Along the coast colored lights were burned, roman candles sputtered, bombs burst with low report, and bonfires crackled and leaped merrily. A particular feature was the sending up of fire balloons, whose courses were watched eagerly until out of sight or devoured by the flames within.

Among those present from Newton were Francis J. Burrage, the secretary, who received the guests, and Messrs. Arthur Howland, P. R. Spaulding, Dr. E. A. Crockett, Earl Johnson, Stephen Matherson, Jr., H. R. Coffin, Quincy Pond, H. L. Burrage and Phillip A. Warner.

The club will have a fancy dress carnival on Feb. 17th.

Newton Cemetery.

The annual meeting of the Newton Cemetery Corporation, will be held at City Hall, next Wednesday evening. It is hoped there will be a quorum present, and that stockholders will show sufficient interest this year to make sure of this.

Woodbury's store is open to customers notwithstanding the reports freely circulated for a month past, that he was going out of business here Feb. 1, and his trade was to be assumed by a new firm. Mr. Woodbury said yesterday in response to an inquiry that he had no idea at any time of discontinuing his store here.

—The Auburndale Fraternal Benefit Association held their annual meeting for the election of officers and to act upon applications for membership next Tuesday evening, Feb. 6. There are quite a large number of applications to be acted upon and it is desired that further applications be forwarded promptly. The association was incorporated by prominent business men two years ago, the first year having paid in just $4.50, one death occurring in that time.

—The vesper service at the Congregational church, Sunday evening, drew out a large congregation, who were well pleased with the musical selections, and the many expressions of approval heard as they left the church. The first selection was the Magnificat in E by Horatio W. Parker. It is a fine composition. We believe this to be the first hearing in Auburndale of any music written by our townsman, who is shown by his works to possess genius of the highest order. Miss Kate Sumner was equal to the demands upon her throughout the evening, and at the close resigned her seat at the organ to Miss Kitty Chapin, who played the people out of church to delightful strains and in a manner highly creditable to herself. Rev. Mr. Culler's short sermon was particularly good. No doubt the excellent lesson it contained each and all of his hearers applied to themselves.

In Memoriam.

At Waban, January 21st, the change called death came to Mrs. W. R. Dresser, causing many sincere friends to mourn the loss to a happy home. A friend to the priest, a loving and devoted wife and mother has gone from a circle her attractive voice and cheerful personality graced. Possessed of a temperament that could appreciate and enjoy the blessing of life, still her brave spirit met the summons calmly and the end was like one who wraps the drapery of her couch about her and lies down to pleasant dreams.

—Trotters from all around came to try Newton's new half mile race track Thursday, and from noon until dark hundreds of people watched the racing. Several business men, with fast horses, petitioned the city council to have the track allowed for driving on Watertown street, when sleighing was good, and the request was granted. The street was rolled down Wednesday and Thursday. Fast horses from Waltham, Wellesley, Needham, Weston, Watertown and the Newtons were present to the number of 40 or 50, and an immense crowd collected, which at one time numbered over 1000 persons. Some exciting races took place and a fast time was made in several instances. No accidents occurred, although only one policeman was detailed for duty to keep the street clear and preserve order. A peculiar circumstance about the permit granted by the city is the fact that the city ordinance forbids driving on the public highways at a higher rate of speed than eight miles an hour, punishable by a heavy fine. There are no regulations governing the aldermen which allow them to grant such a permit, and if an accident should occur on the piece of road through fast driving, the city authorities could not be held responsible, while, on the other hand, those driving faster than the prescribed limit, as above, are amenable to the penalty there set forth.

CALENDAR.
February 5. Teams 11 vs 13. 4 vs 5.
February 6. Teams 9 vs 10. 12 vs 14.
February 7. Teams 1 vs 3. 6 vs 8.
February 8. Teams 2 vs 4. 7 vs 9.

The predictions of the experts are being fulfilled in the contest in the team tournament are opening in a way that shows it will be a fight to the very end.

The interest at this early stage shows that every contestant feels his team to be a sure winner if he only does his part, and only sickness or urgent business, will prevent his attention to practice and attendance at the scheduled games.

That the teams have been evenly matched is proven by the record already made. The fourteen games with a total of 3038 pins the average is only 37 pins above the team rating as made by the committee. That is but 2.7 pins per man above the individual rating.

With such facts before him, it was inevitable that when the bowler should appreciate more fully the importance of systematic practice. The chances of individual improvement have been carefully weighed and properly apportioned and that team which most thoroughly develops its reserve strength will surely succeed.

It will be interesting to watch the progress of this contest from a study of the daily practice work of the various contestants and only from that work can an approximate estimate be made as to the winner. Watch the alleys during the open hours and you will observe the active captains and earnest team members.

Many club men will remember that famous J—A—team which was so poorly thought of by its own members as to have been self styled after a certain patient, hardworking, much abused, long eared animal, and yet this same team by systematic, energetic, persistent practice easily distanced all competitors and won first honors. How much more now, than then, will practice tell!

At the head of the fourteen teams are the fourteen best bowlers in the club. It will certainly be interesting to study the leadership of these fourteen men. Which one of them is going to bring out and develop to the fullest the material at his command? Which one will originate the best system of practice, the best style of ball, the most perfect team work. Each has his own idea and each will carry out his own system, but there will be one better than the others. Which one?

The systems differ widely as the individuality of the men. One proposes pitting his team, once a week in the ladies' alleys, against a team from one of the other divisions. Another captain proposes devoting a few hours each week to single pin and combination work, and still another says all he wants his men to do is to practice. The final result will depend not a little on the system or lack of system.

In the contests Friday night between teams 11 and 12 Mr. C. W. Hamilton of team 11 made a three string total of 523 with a single string of 201. On the same evening Mr. H. N. Jones of team 3 made a total of 522 in three very even strings, showing steadier work than that of Mr. Hamilton, if not so brilliant. Mr. W. F. Dearborn also passed the 500 mark, continuing the remarkable work he has recently been doing. Monday night Mr. R. W. Buntin was the only gentleman to distinguish himself, although some of his team tried hard to make a record. How well they succeeded is shown by the score.

In Monday night's game between teams 6 and 10 Mr. C. A. Haskell was high roller with 510. Mr. W. H. Plummer 510, Mr. C. W. Loring 508. Mr. Loring made spars 6, 10 and 7, 5, 6 and 10; Mr. Haskell 1, 2 and 7; Mr. C. H. Buswell 5 and 10; and Mr. N. P. Cutler 5, 6 and 10. It was by far the best game both for spectators and participants thus far rolled and the next meeting of these teams will attract general interest.

The Vesper Boat Club bowlers of Lowell met on Newton last evening and won in a league match from the home team, thereby strengthening its chance for finishing at the top in the first division. A large delegation of Lowell people, headed by ex-Mayor Palmer, accompanied the visitors. The scores were: Vespers, 2510; Newtons, 2425.

NOT CALLED.

He may be a scholar familiar with books. In person a model, unrivaled for looks. An orator, too, like the great Mr. Buff. But this, to our notion, is not quite enough. In language decided the truth must be told. We think for our parish he's rather too old.

For aught that we hear of he may be a saint. And none of his errors makes any complaint. He knows all the canons and rubrics by heart. And off to the needy will blessings impart. But he isn't the shepherd we want at our fold. We think for our parish he's rather too old.

Did you ever learn that experience tells And work by a master for full value sells You make a mistake when that man you pass by And say, when inquired of the reason and why.

In language emphatic, "The truth must be told. We think for our parish he's rather too old."

Oh, what shall we do when our pastors get gray And cannot quite compass the world in a day? I know nothing else save devoutly to pray They soon may be called to some region away.

Where angels invite to the city of gold, And none will refuse them for being too old. —Tacoma New Era.

CONVINCED.

Peter Carter pushed his chair back from the table and surveyed the faded little face on the opposite side of the tea tray.

Faded enough now, though she was barely 27. You would hardly have believed how fresh and pretty Carry Carver had been on her wedding day. Her husband saw the change, but somehow he supposed all women faded just so.

"There is so much to do, Peter, and the children demand so much of time," pleaded the meek wife.

"If I were manager in this household, things would happen very differently."

"I have no doubt of it," said Carry quietly.

"There is no earthly reason," went on Mr. Carver, ignoring the sarcastic meaning of her tone, "why the work shouldn't be done and you dressed and enjoying yourself, cultivating your mind or something, at 11 o'clock every morning that you live. Washing up a few dishes, sweeping a room or two—what does it all amount to? Why, my dear, don't you see the folly of asking for a servant to help you do nothing at all?"

The morning sunshine crept down the pale green wall paper, sprinkling drops of gold on the few little geranium plants that Peter called a "waste of time" and lay in noon splendors on the carpet, and still Carry Carver stood there, thinking—thinking.

"Carry! Aren't you going to get up this morning? It is half past 7, and—" "Carry! Not, Peter," groaned Carry, turning her face away from the light. "I am suffering such dreadful pains in that foot I sprained last night."

"Well, what shall I do?"

"You must take charge of the house-keeping yourself, Peter," said Carry, hiding a smile in the folds of her pillow. "It's only for a day or two, and I don't know of any help you can obtain. It won't be much, you know."

"That's true," said Peter, somewhat encouraged.

"Please darken the room, and keep the children away, and don't speak to me if you can help it. I have such a racking headache, and the least excitement drives me wild."

Peter shut the door with distracting caution and went down stairs on creaking tiptoe. As he passed the nursery door a duet of voices chimed on his ears.

"Papa, papa, we are not dressed."

"Dress yourselves, then, can't you?" said Mr. Carver, pausing.

"Pet is too little to dress herself," said Tommy loftily, "and mamma always dressed me!"

"Where are your shoes?"

"I don't know," said Tommy, with his finger in his mouth.

"I know," said Pet, aptly revenging herself for the hit at her diminutive proportions. "Tommy dropped them out of the window."

Crash! went a fancy bottle of cologne off the table as Tommy groped for his garters. Bang! fell Mrs. Carver's rosewood writing desk to the floor, bursting off the frail hinges and scattering pens, envelopes and postage stamps far and wide.

Mr. Peter Carver was an affectionate father in a general way, but human nature could not have endured this.

And he bundled the two little creatures miscellaneous into whatever articles came uppermost, sending off strings and fracturing buttonholes in frantic desperation.

The fire obstinately declined to burn, although Mr. Carver opened the oven doors alternately and drew out all the dampers he could spy.

"Confound the fire!" said Mr. Carver, mopping his wet forehead with the stove cloth. "It won't go. I'll have a blaze of kindling and try the breakfast on that."

He seized the ham and carved several thick slices, which he transferred deftly to a gridiron, and then, elated with his success, broke several eggs over the ham.

"Bless me, how they run!" he ejaculated, rather puzzled. "But I know I'm right. I wonder why this coffee doesn't boil. I'll stick in a few more kindlings—that's the idea. There are the children crying—hungry, I suppose. I do believe they do nothing but eat and cry." Mr. Carver rushed to attend the peremptory summons of the milkman.

And then he sat down, tired and spiritless, to a repast of half cooked meat and liquid mud, by courtesy termed coffee.

He looked despairingly around at the chaos that reigned in the kitchen.

"Nine o'clock, as I live—and nothing done. Well, I see very plainly there's no office for me today. Now, then, what's wanting?"

"The clothes for the wash, please, sir," said a little girl, courtseying humbly at the door.

"Up stairs and down stairs" went Peter Carver, laying hands on whatever he considered proper prey for the washbub, rummaging in bureau drawers, upheaving the contents of trunks and turning wardrobes inside out for a mortal hour you, I was obliged to submit. As he was then too ill to be opposed—

"But you inherit the estate!" I repeated, with the same melancholy irony.

"I inherit it—well!"

She gazed fixedly at me.

"If you were in my place, what would you think?" I exclaimed.

"Just what you will think," and she drew a small packet from her pocket and handed it to me, saying, "Forgive the old man and destroy this proof of his delirium."

I was too much astonished to speak. My hands trembled. I vaguely realized how wrong I had been in blaming her.

"What do you mean?" I finally stammered.

"That is the will. I give it to you, and you remain the heir of your unhappy uncle."

I was so overcome by her answer that I was obliged to lean against the wall for support—so ashamed that I could not look her in the face—her whom I had so basely accused.

After a few minutes I collected myself and begged in a supplicating voice:

"Forgive me! Take back this packet! I would rather die than accept the estate on such conditions."

"And I!" she exclaimed vehemently and disdainfully. "Do you think that I will touch it? Do you think that I would defile myself by stealing?"

"I have misunderstood you," I exclaimed. "I have acted like a brute. I am a miserable fool."

"It does not matter now. We shall probably never see each other again."

She spoke gently in an absent manner. Her beautiful eyes had a faraway look, and now I knew that she was really pure, innocent, stainless.

"Ah!" I murmured. "Of what use is the money to me! To receive it thus from your hands is the hardest of punishments. I will not have it! To receive it from you who refused me so coldly, from you who despise me with such humiliating gentleness! I should consider myself disgraced for life!"

"What do you say? Disgraced because I return to you what belongs to you? Because I refuse to profit by the unreasonable whim of an invalid?"

She retreated a few steps, and her admirable beauty filled my heart with adoration. "Ah! why would you not accept my love?" I cried. "Why would you let me have no part in your life?"

"I was a poor girl, treated with kindness and trusted. I should have betrayed that kindness and trust in listening to you."

"Would you have listened to me then if you had been rich?" I exclaimed.

She cast down her eyes and remained a minute undecided. Then lifting her long eyelashes she said simply:

"I think so!"

My excitement increased, words failed me, and I could only stammer:

"But now—you can!"

She motioned me to be silent. After a few minutes of deep thought she said:

"Today I think that I have the right to listen to you. My refusal or acceptance depends now only upon my own inclination."

I approached and implored her:

"Accept my life or refuse it!"

"I will not refuse," she answered gently. And suddenly smiling sweetly she said, with subtle feminine irony:

"I would never have refused it, for if you fell quickly in love with me I, too, was not slow in loving you."

I caught Laure's hands and kissed them humbly, but she gently drew them away and begged me to remember the presence of the dead, which, to tell the truth, I had almost forgotten.

Thus I captured my inheritance.—Romance.

An English Luncheon.

On one such occasion I saw a company of poets, philosophers and fanatics at table presided over by a young lady, the daughter of the house. I sat there wiping my forehead (they do the eating, I the perspiring) as I saw slices of beef disappearing with vegetables, mustard, etc.

The host then asked me what I thought of the food and the mode of eating. I replied instinctively, "It is horrible!" This reply set the gentlemen roaring and my hostess blushing.

How can a little stomach hold such an enormous lunch? Even women and children take large quantities. What vitality these people have, to be sure! The waste of vitality in their climate and under their conditions of life must be enormous. It has of course to be replaced.

"An Indian Eye on English Life," by Behramji Malabrai.

She Was Dyspeptic.

One of Portland's dyspeptic women—may her tribe decrease—was taking a dinner with friends, and when after picking over the good things the last course had been reached, and the hostess rather doubtfully offered her guest a piece of mince pie, the visitor said:

"I don't think I'd better take any. I can't eat mince pie unless it is very poor." The hostess said, "Perhaps this would suit you," and she finally decided to try half a piece. This she ate with evident relish, and passing her plate said, "I think you may give me the rest of that pie; it just suits me."

The good housekeeper is trying hard to convince herself that she got a compliment.—Portland (Me.) Express.

Prince of Wales' Bracelet.

It is probably not generally known that the Prince of Wales wears a bracelet on his left wrist. On a recent occasion when he appeared in public the gleam of the golden bangle was noticed by a very few individuals, and among those who noticed it there was an interchange of wondering glances. The wearing of the bracelet is not, however, foppishness on the part of his royal highness, for the bangle has a history. It belonged originally to Maximilian, the ill fated emperor of Mexico, and it is a cherished possession of the prince's.—London Tit-Bits.

MILITUM IN PARVO.

Miss Julia A. Wells has taken an elegant house at 321 Beacon street, Boston, and we are glad to see a member of the musical profession meeting with such evident success. Miss Wells is a fine teacher and a popular drawing room soloist. Her musicales are of the genuine Back Bay type.

Miss Marie Delano, the soprano soloist and teacher at 200 Tremont street, Boston, is a bright and engaging lady, winning her way to popular favor.

Art studios, costume parlors and high grade merchandise of all kinds are gathering about Copley square in Boston. That is the place for it. Among the painters in the Pierce building are Miss Harriet T. Durgin and Miss Lyle Durgin, artists in oil and water colors; Mrs. J. Stirling, teacher of French; Miss Annie G. Gross, teacher of piano-forte; Walter K. Fobes, teacher of elocution, and the Copley square school.

At the pleasant and convenient building at the corner of Boylston and Exeter streets, you can find Miss S. L. Violette, French robes; Mr. Wm. Adam, artist; Dr. Thomas, chiropodist and Miss Murphy, hairdresser.

Prof. W. N. Eaves, the well known college tutor, is at 188 Dartmouth street, Boston, while in the same building is the French dyeing establishment of E. A. Mutel & Son.

The Posse gymnasium, with its hundreds of students in physical culture, is at 23 Irvington street, Boston. In the same building is Miss Helen M. Knowlton, the distinguished artist. The benefits of Baron Posse's gymnasium to the general public is none the less marked because so many young people attend it as a popular fad. There are numerous other teachers and schools in this vicinity, some of the most prominent being the Berkeley school in the Y. M. C. A. building; Miss L. P. Morrill, at the Oxford; Mrs. S. B. Field, at the Huntington, so frequently engaged as pianist in Newton; Frederick A. Metcalf, at Emerson College of Oratory; Mrs. L. B. Farwell, soprano at 25 Warren avenue; Miss Sarah Ames, at 123 St. Botolph street; while on St. James avenue are Miss Grace G. Davis at No. 64; Miss Gertrude Capen, at No. 12 and Miss L. F. Woodard at No. 25.

Mrs. Carlyle Petersilea, who was for several years the real head of the famous Petersilea Academy of Music, is now teaching the piano-forte at 62 Boylston street, Boston, with about sixty pupils. We are glad to see her prosper.

About fourteen hundred residents of Newton do business in Boston. That is a surprisingly large number and it shows how closely the interests of the two cities are identified.

Boston wants the trade of Newton, and why shouldn't it? Newton is a very wealthy city and its people live in a style becoming its wealth and position. To do that requires a large expenditure for high priced goods. The Boston merchants know that the best way to get the trade and money of Newton is to advertise in the GRAPHIC.

Mrs. Emily Greaves of the Hotel Berkeley, Boston, has a way of treating the face and throat which deserves more than a passing notice. Our ladies should look up the matter for themselves.

A lady, in speaking of Mrs. Johnson's toilet parlors, 7 Temple place, Boston, the other day, remarked that "the ladies in attendance were so polite and attentive it was a pleasure to call on them."

The electric needle in the hands of Mrs. Elyn J. Blake, 205 West Chester Park, Boston, is doing much to improve the appearance of ladies with superfluous hair.

TO MAKE FARMERS OF THEM.

New York's Poor Boys to Be Trained by the Children's Aid Society.

Mr. Joseph M. White of this city has bought for the Children's Aid society a 125 acre farm. The society purposes here to establish a farm training school for the older boys who come under its charge.

The question of what to do with lads of from 14 to 18 years old has long troubled the society. Many farmers are unwilling to take city boys of that age who have never had any training. They can do something in the way of correction for the younger boys, but very little when they are more than 14.

It was decided that a farm on which the boys could receive some training in agriculture as well as religious instruction would solve the difficulty. Those boys who proved themselves willing to work and behave themselves could be sent to farmers' homes, while those who showed no disposition to get along could be returned to the city.

A committee of the board of trustees advertised for a suitable farm and soon had about 40 under consideration. One of these, two miles north of Kenosha on the Harlem railroad, seemed the best, but it was beyond the reach of the society, which had only about $10,000 to spend—half the sum required.

Mrs. White heard of the committee's troubles about three months ago. She offered to buy the farm outright for the society on condition that it would appropriate the $10,000 it had intended to expend to an endowment fund.

She made one other condition—that the boys on the farm should receive daily religious instruction. The society of course agreed. Mrs. White also added $10,000 more to the endowment fund. The deed for the farm is now in the society's hands.

The boys will be kept under a firm discipline. It is not expected to keep them on the farm more than a few months each. It is thought in that time it can be determined whether they are worthy to go into private homes.

One or two practical farmers will be on hand to direct the efforts of the boys. The produce raised will be sold in the neighboring villages or sent to this city for sale. It is hoped in this way to keep the expenses of the farm at a minimum.

The society expects to have from 150 to 200 boys there when everything gets into running order.

In the 40 years of its existence the Children's Aid society has found homes on farms for 75,000 homeless boys and girls. It has long desired such a place as that provided by Mrs. White, where it could give the elder boys some preliminary training before sending them into the homes of the farmers.—New York Herald.

—The storm on Tuesday did not interfere with traffic to a great extent. The Boston & Albany trains were more or less late during the day but no serious inconveniences followed. The trains between Newton and Boston line were about as good at dodging time as they have proved all winter, but of course, did not inconvenience a great many people. The highway men were out early breaking out the gutters, and making the sidewalks passable. The electric snow plow caused a great deal of trouble as anything, three accidents occurring with horses frightened at the machine.

One of W. O. Knapp's horses, driven by J. Hall, was frightened on Willow street, by the snow plow running up behind the team. The horse cleared himself at a bound, pulling Mr. Hall over the dasher into the snow. He held on pluckily, after being dragged about 50 feet succeeded in stopping the horse. Mr. Hall's clothing was badly torn and he was somewhat bruised. The same horse was frightened later in the day by the electric plow. James Scott, who was driving, stopped him, but not before he had broken the harness. One of Richardson's teams came near being smashed up during the day.

—A new phase in the scarlet fever scare has appeared. The Mason Grammar school, with four hundred pupils, has been holding regular sessions. No alarm was felt about scarlet fever there until it was learned that children from infected families were in constant attendance. One local physician telephoned this fact to Dr. Curtis of the board of health last Thursday, who replied that he could do nothing for a day or so. He physician went to Miss Hartley's schoolroom and there dismissed the pupils at his request. One pupil came from a family in which there was a case of scarlet fever. Two other physicians then had the children of their patrons taken from the school. Quite a number of children in all have been withdrawn to await action by the school or health authorities, to both of whom appeals have until recently been unsuccessful. Fumigation of the Mason schoolhouse at private expense has been considered. The school board has now requested the board of health to fumigate the building and the latter has consented to do so. The board of health believes that there is no necessity for fumigation, and the school board think that the summary closing of Miss Hartley's schoolroom was not properly authorized.

—The ladies of the Monday club gave a delightful luncheon, with Dill as caterer, at the residence of Mrs. Robinson on Chester street last Monday afternoon. Small tables were tastefully arranged in the reception hall and parlor, and from these the lunch was served at one o'clock. Mrs. Nickerson and Mrs. Pennell presided. The afternoon was devoted to art, papers being read by Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. Strong, Mrs. Pratt, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Nickerson. The next meeting of the club will be with Mrs. Hopkins.

—In spite of the severe storm on Monday evening a large company gathered in the Highland Clubhouse upon invitation of the Chautauque Circle. At eight o'clock the President, Mrs. Darius Cobb, gracefully introduced Dr. Louis Kolborn, who read a scholarly paper on the "Development of German Music." Illustrations were sung from Bach, Handel, Beethoven, Mozart, Schumann, Wagner, Brahms and others by Mr. Wilhelm Heinrich, whose songs were all enthusiastically applauded. A reception was held in the parlors the guests being received by the president, Mrs. Cobb, the vice-president, Mrs. Logan, and by the president and vice-president of the Highland Club. Presiding at the tables were Mrs. Bellamy, Miss Manson and the three ex-presidents, Mrs. Elliott Hyde, Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Heckman.

Mrs. Walter H. Stearns of this place, who pressed that it might not be the last time she might entertain them.

-The reception given by the King's Daughters' at the Grace church parish

Ole Bull, on Brattle street, Cambridge.
Only immediate relatives and a few particular friends witnessed the happy event, which united two of Cambridge's best families. In the drawing room, which had been adorned with palms, roses and violets, Bishop Lawrence read the service. The bride was gowned in a simple dress of white Japanese crepe, and was given away by her uncle, Mr. Joseph Thorpe. Little Miss Mamie Thorpe, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. There were no ushers and no bridesmaids. The groom is a promising under a trolley, and the horse became frightened and ran. In turning the corner in front of Bunting's market, the horse took to the sidewalk and was caught. The sleigh was broken, but happily Mr. Gould escaped injury.

-All the arrangements for the exhibit of photographs at the Newton Camera Club House have been completed. This promises to be as interesting to lovers of photography, as was the exhibition held last year in Eliot hall, and it is hoped that having the rooms open day and evening will enable all who may wish to view the work done by the members and their friends. The Newton & Waltham cars from whence it is but a short distance to the clubhouse. Any Newton amateur wishing to exhibit is requested to send his name to the secretary, Chas. H.

Fewkes, on or before Feb. 14.

-The monthly sociable given at the Immanuel Baptist church last evening was unusually enjoyable. To begin with, nearly every member of the church and congregation was present. The committee distributed a splendid slip containing the words of old familiar songs, which everybody knew, so that the walls were soon resounding with the strains of "Auld Lang Syne," "Swanee River," "O come, some away,"
"Bonnie Doon" and many others, which awakened sweet reminiscences of the past.
Mrs. Merrill sang "Coming through the Rye"

ings were contributed by the pastor, Mr.
Merrill, and Mr. Camp. After refreshments were served, and a social hour enjoyed by all, some one struck up a march and a most delightful evening's enjoyment was concluded with a grand promenade.

Police Removals.

A special meeting of the mayor and alderman was held at City Hall, last evening, and the results were of a somewhat sensational nature.

All the members were present except Aldermen Plummer and Hamilton, and the reading of the records was omitted.

The mayor then removed James D.
Henthorne, and Robert W. Blue from the regular police force and J. E. Mc-Mahon from the force as a special officer.

The resignation of W. M. O. Harlow of the regular force, was read and accepted, but no charge is made against him, and he resigns to go into business.

These appointments were then made, Wade E. Dearborn and Richard Kyte to be patrolmen for a probationary period, of six months.

The appointments were confirmed.
Alderman Bothfield presented an order which passed, appropriating $300 for legal expenses of the city solicitor's office.

mission granting fast driving on Watertown street be rescinded, the vote being favorable.

Commander Wetherbee.

Senior Vice-Commander Wilfred A.
Wetherbee of Newton was unanimously chosen yesterday, as department commander of the Massachusetts G. A. R.
The honor was a noteworthy one, and as he appeared after the ballot was announced, he was roundly applauded, and made a vigorous speech, thanking the encampment for the honor of electing him, and asking that he be given cooperation in his efforts to build up the order. He assured the delegates that the coming year would be a working year, and each post should do everything possible for the department.

Wilfred A. Wetherbee was born in Newton 46 years ago. When 16 years of age he enlisted in Newton, company K, 42d Massachusetts volunteers.

After returning from the scenes of civil strife, he settled down in Newton, and has since then resided in this city. For many years he has been engaged in the clothing business, and is now connected with the house of Shattman Bros., New York and Boston.

Mr. Wetherbee joined Charles Ward post 62, G. A. R., of Newton, at the time of its organization, a little more than a quarter of a century ago, and has since taken an active interest in all matters pertaining to the Grand Army of the Republic. He passed through the several offices of the Newton post, and was the commander for three successive years.

Two years ago, he was elected senior-vice commander, department of Massachusetts, his election to that position following two years' service as department inspector. At the annual encampment, a year ago, he was elected senior-vice-commander, department of Massachusetts.

Mr. Wetherbee is very popular in the posts throughout the state, and made many friends when serving as department inspector.

He is a good speaker, can tell an interesting story in an entertaining way, and has the faculty of keeping in touch with the boys.

Mr. Wetherbee is not only popular in Grand Army circles, but in society and among business men as well. He is quite a prominent Mason and has passed through the chairs of Dalhousie lodge,
F. and A. M.

Tommy, "Paw, what is a 'limb of the law'?"

Mr. Figz. "I guess it means the leg your lawyer pulls every time you ask him a question." [Exchange.]

NEWTON CLUB NOTES.

CALENDAR.

Saturday, February 17th. Gentlemen's night.

Thursday, February 15th. Reviews at Newton.

The entertainment committee have arranged a treat for the next gentlemen's night having secured the Megatherian minstrels for that occasion.

The popularity of the first of these nights was so great as to encourage the committee to continue them and for the future they will be one of the monthly features. Steward Jackson will serve a 75c. table d'hote dinner on that night and if it meets with reasonable encouragement he will continue it on all gentlemen's nights and possibly every Saturday night.

The dinner dance on Wednesday evening at the Newton Club was a new and delightful feature of the monthly ladies night of that organization. This impromptu dinner which originated with a few intimates increased so rapidly in numbers as to threaten to grow out of all proportions, but as the dining facilities of the club are extensive the seventy-two diners seated on this occasion only served to show there would still have been room for the many other would be participants who refrained from fear of overtaxing those facilities. The tables were refreshingly spread with white and green depending on the brilliant evening costumes of the ladies for its illumination. Dainty green shaded lamps in profusion cast a soft light on the brilliant assembly and while an orchestra rendered a varied program. Steward Jackson served a most delicious course dinner with all the rapidity and elegance demanded by the most critical.

The various rooms so beautifully thrown together allowed of tables of unusual shapes and variety in decoration though the color throughout was confined to green and white.

Among those present in groups of four,
six, sixteen, eighteen and twenty, were,
Pres. Henry E. Cobb, Mrs. Cobb, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs.
Fred Felton, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Priest,
Mr. Morton Cobb, Miss Byers, Mr. Dunham, Miss Cobb, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen

Immediately following the dinner, dancing was in order in the Assembly hall, where an unusually large party were in attendance.

Billard and Pool.

The handicap tournament is fast being completed and although through an error in handicapping Mr. F. W. Prescott seems at present to be a sure winner, having won 8 games and lost one, yet many close and interesting games have been played. Three were played on Saturday, January 27, which were very interesting.

One between Mr. John B. Goodrich and Mr. F. W. Lunt being especially so on account of Mr. Goodrich's handicap of 25 points. He played a strong and steady game in the face of the handicap and won by the score of 100 to 88.

At the same time Mr. Fisher Ames and Mr. S. W. Tucker, both in the first class were contesting a close game. Mr.
Ames winning by score of 100 to 97. After the completion of the above games
Mr. Fisher and Mr. Goodrich crossed cues, but Mr. Goodrich, tired by his efforts with Mr. Lunt, was unable to do himself justice and was defeated by a score of 100 to 66.

The same evening Mr. Follett, assisted by many friends, won his pool match with Mr. Lunt, score 50 to 32.

The games yet to be played, it is thought will be very close.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

AN INTERESTING LICENSE HEARING—LAND ON WABAN HILL READY TO BE PURCHASED BY THE WATER BOARD.

The board of mayor and aldermen met in regular session at City Hall, West Newton, Monday evening, Alderman Hamilton only being absent.

The records of the two previous meetings were read and approved.

The Wellesley & Boston Street Railway Co. presented a petition through Alderman Roffe for an extension of the time for constructing the tracks, claiming the sewer had interfered with the same. A hearing was appointed for Feb. 19, at 8 o'clock.

Mellen Bray of Ward Six petitioned for license to set up and run a fifty horse power engine and boiler, use in heating and lighting his new block on Union street. A hearing was granted for Feb. 19, at 7:45 o'clock.

A HEARING.

A hearing was opened at this time on a notice served Thomas F. Kelly to see why his 6th class liquor license should not be revoked. Thomas F. Kelly & Co. are the parties who purchased the Norumbega pharmacy at Nonantum from Willie M. Russell.

J. J. Sullivan said he appeared to represent Mr. Kelly who was present.

The mayor desired first to ask Mr. Kelly a few questions.

The mayor—Have you a license from the State board of pharmacy?

Yes sir.

Will you tell me the number and form of that license?

I don't know what the number is, it is something in the 600's. What do you mean by form?

Was it a first or second class license.

I don't know.

Where is that license?

In Waltham.

Are you in business there?

Yes sir.

Where is your pharmacist license posted?

At the Waltham store.

How much time do you spend at your store here?

I am there off and on as required to superintend the business.

How long a time has elapsed between visits?

Sometimes a week or ten days.

A month?

No, never a month that I have not dropped in there.

What do you mean by "drop in."

Stop there to see if anything was needed.

How long are you there at a time?

From one half to two hours.

You have a registered druggist there all the time?

Yes sir, Mr. Page attends to the business and is a registered pharmacist.

With a license from the State board?

Yes sir.

The city marshal produced a certificate book which he stated came from Mr. Kelly's drug store.

The mayor to Mr. Kelly—Do you recognize this book?

No sir, know nothing about the book.

Have never made a sale or put up a prescription in Newton.

Look at it and see if it is made out as required by law?

No sir, it is not.

Has any liquor to your knowledge been sold from your store to a person who had been convicted in the municipal court?

Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Kelly told what the law required in filling out the certificates and said the book had not been kept as required by law. He had cautioned his man regarding the same.

Mr. Sullivan was then allowed to speak. He said in June last a law was passed providing that a license of the 6th class was made void in case the druggist or pharmacist did not carry on the business personally. The defendant was then carrying on business in Waltham and the requirement would have been impossible for him to carry out.

Even had he known of the law which he did not until Saturday last. The agent of the State board, who then informed him of the law for the first time, said his license was void. This fact made useless any attempt to show that the business had been properly conducted, although a strong petition and proofs were forthcoming.

Mr. Kelly further stated that when notified of the law at 3 o'clock, Saturday, he immediately came to his store in Newton and had everything sealed up and closed the store. He said he had been in business for 11 years and never before had a complaint or had anything of this nature been brought against him. He was ready to surrender all rights in the premises.

REPORTS.

The reports of the trustees of the Read fund, of the sinking fund commissioners and the water board were received and filed.

Hearings were held for the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. for location of poles in Parker and Dudley streets, for main drain and sewers in Hunnewell terrace and on the Barnes estate. No remonstrants appeared and they were closed.

Alderman Roffe presented a petition for a sewer in private way called Kenwood avenue in Ashton Park. Referred.

Samuel McDonald petitioned for license to conduct one pool table at 317 Water town street and a hearing was set for Feb. 19, at 8:15 o'clock.

An order was presented by Alderman Bothfield, authorizing the city treasurer to receive from Hannah F. Goodwin the sum of $125 on account of the drainage of the Mague meadow. Passed.

WABAN HILL PURCHASE.

An order was passed authorizing the expenditure of $6,534 by the water board for the purchase of land on Waban hill.

This land was originally taken Dec. 30, 1889, but until now the rightful owners could not be ascertained.

These orders as passed last year for the issue of time notes were rescinded and duplicate orders substituted as follows: $7900 for work on Mill and Needham streets, $50,000 for the new Newton Highlands school house, $8000 for the highway stable on Auburndale avenue.

Alderman Plummer presented an order that $500 be appropriated for the use of the committee on claims.

Wm. E. Sheldon petitioned for one street lamp on Highland street above Hunter street. Referred.

A. J. Flske and thirteen others petitioned for a fire alarm signal box, corner of River and Heathaw streets. Referred.

ferred. Alderman Hunt presented a communication from Nancy Bailey through her attorney, claiming damages for alleged injuries received on Lander street Dec. 18. Referred.

Alderman Hunt reported for the committee on sewers, recommending the taking of land between Oxford and Parker streets; also on petition of Dwight Chester for drain. Received.

The report of City Engineer Woods establishing a sewer assessment schedule on various streets was received, also reports establishing special assessments.

Walter Chesley, Ward Five, was drawn as juror to the superior court, and Stephen F. Chase, Ward Two, and Charles L. Fields, Ward Three, as jurors to the Cambridge court.

E. F. Barnes, James F. C. Hyde, E. J. Hyde, S. W. Tucker and James W. Forno were granted licenses as auctioneers.

Alderman Hunt presented an order which passed, authorizing the city treasurer to levy and collect sewer assessments, also similar orders relating to special assessments.

Louis Watson, et al., petitioned that a street light be moved 500 feet from the corner of Washington street and Brookside avenue to Walker street.

Alderman Plummer read a communication from Soden & Carter in which they offered their land in Auburndale as a public dumping ground. Referred to the board of health.

Alderman Rumery presented an order appropriating $125 for a fire alarm signal box on Bellevue street between Summit and Claremont streets.

Alderman Plummer asked if fire alarm boxes now cost the city $125.

Chief Bixby, who was present, stated by request that the box would cost $75 and $50 was estimated for constructing wires and making connections.

Alderman Bothfield asked if it was customary to have an extra appropriation for construction of connections, and was answered in the affirmative.

The chief said that was an additional box for which no provision had previously been made. The order passed as the order was so worded as to require only such part of the appropriation as necessary to be spent.

Alderman Rumery presented an order which passed, appropriating $300 for the purchase of a horse and harness for use in the inspector of wires department.

Alderman Rumery presented this order:

Ordered, That his honor the mayor be hereby requested to direct the heads of all city departments in advertising work in their several departments, to state in such advertisement that preference is to be given so far as possible to mechanics and laboring men who are citizens of Newton; for contract involving the performance of mechanical and other labor for the city, a clause shall be inserted providing that citizens of Newton, verified by the board of registrars of voters or assessors, shall be employed by the contractors as far as possible for the performance of such mechanical or other labor.

Alderman Bothfield did not want to discuss the order until he was more thoroughly informed about it. He moved to table and it was so voted.

Alderman Rumery presented an order which passed, authorizing the committee on fire department to expend $900 for two new hose wagons.

An order was passed to take private land for sewers between Oxford and Parker streets, and a hearing was appointed for Monday, March 5, at 7:30 o'clock before the aldermen and Monday, March 12, at 7:45 o'clock before the common council.

An order was passed to lay sewer in Glenwood avenue between Parker street and Ridge avenue.

HAVE IT SETTLED.

Alderman Thompson said he wished to request the opinion of the city solicitor on the legality of a point suggested by an editorial in the GRAPHIC a few weeks since. The article in question called attention to the fact that Mr. Eugene Fanning, who had been elected overseer of the poor from Ward Five, was a member of a firm which is largely interested in city contracts. He desired the opinion of the city solicitor whether an office holder of the city could be directly interested in a business way with the city, also the propriety of a city official holding several offices under the city and drawing salaries for each.

The request was heartily seconded by members of the board.

The board then went into executive session.

The Newton Grade Question.

The discussion in Newton relative to elevating the tracks of the Boston & Albany railroad has suggested to a prominent Boston citizen the experiences connected with the crossing improvements at Springfield. To a Herald reporter this gentleman said:

"The Boston & Albany has spent more money on its bridges, road beds and the removal of its grade crossings than any other road in New England.

"The Newton changes are about the last in this line, and the most important. The best engineers have been employed and much time and money expended in endeavoring to solve this question to the best interest of the road and the public, and the opposition aroused by the citizens is as unreasonable as uncalled for.

"It recalls to my mind a similar experience between the road and the city of Springfield. A dangerous grade crossing across the main street at Springfield was a constant menace to business and a source of daily anxiety, and I obtained an act of the Legislature by which the grade should be separated. Yet 20 years ago citizens and others objected, and the same arguments now used at Newton were urged at Springfield.

"However, the company finally succeeded in raising its road, and now, after its completion, Springfield is boasting of the best railroad stations and facilities in the state; no grade crossings and everything lovely and perfect. There is not only no objection now, but it is hard to find any one who will admit that he ever opposed it.

"People evidently forget that a railroad to go over a street requires but 12 feet head room, while the street to go over the railroad must have 18 feet in the clear, making one-third difference in the elevation to be obtained.

"Raising the railway and slightly depressing the street would be not only the most convenient in every respect, but really more ornamental."

Penny Savings System.

It may be thought that this winter is a very unsuitable time to press the need of saving small sums of money upon poor people, and their children, but never were such endeavors more timely. It would greatly astound that half of the world that does not know how the other half lives, to know the number of pennies that are spent for candy by the very small children in the schools of our poorest districts. Possibly the sum would not be quite as large this winter as in more prosperous times, but it would be quite large enough to be astonishing. So long as one has a little money in one's pocket, it does not seem hard to give one cent to a small child. Perhaps the children do errands for the neighbors and are paid. However they get them plenty of pennies the little children do have, and they spend them one and two at a time for candy.

On the other hand, the poor people are having a tremendous object lesson in the importance of laying up money while they are earning it, against the time when they have no work. There never was a time when it was easier to induce people to lay by a little than it is now.

Ask the cashiers of our savings banks how many thousand dollars they have received on deposit during the seven or eight days of this year, and in how small sums? Since the middle of November, one school of little children in a district of working people, whose teachers use the Penny Savings System, has bought twenty dollars' worth of stamps, principally one cent, three and five cents in value. The month of December, too, is one in which very few stamps are sold, and many are redeemed. It is an excellent way to save up money for Christmas.

The system has lost three of its agents by death, and other causes have operated to close four others; but those that remain are doing good business as ever at this season. More agents are needed, especially at Nonantum and West Newton, where the habit of using the stamps has been formed, and would be continued if there were any station where the stamps could be bought. The treasurer of the Penny Savings System is Mr. Albert Metcalf of West Newton, who is in the savings bank of that ward, over three hundred dollars still on deposit, though depositors are encouraged to open bank accounts of their own as soon as the value of their cards has reached five dollars. It is not, however, the money alone that is laid up, that shows the good result of this work. Children and young people are taught that pennies and nickels collected, accumulate into dollars, and that the child who never has more than a cent at a time, may by saving them up, find himself able to buy something that costs twenty-five cents. They are taught not only to save money, but to spend it. When a girl has gone without sodas and caramels for a year, and buying stamps instead, is able to pay for a generous supply of class photographs for herself instead of having to ask her father or mother for them, has she not learned a much-needed lesson, whose influence may be felt throughout her life?

Taxing Street Railways.

Some cities are deriving a handsome revenue from the street railways that have locations in their streets, and the franchises are not given away as is too often the case in our cities. The Engineering News has this account of the experience of a Canadian city:

The city of Toronto appears to be particularly successful in securing public service at low rates. The city is supplied with a network of electric car lines, operated by a private company under contract to the city. The company pays the city a rental of $800 per mile of track per annum, and a percentage of the gross receipts varying from 8 per cent. to 20 per cent., according to the total amount received. A complete system of transfers is in force, and while the single fare is 5 cents, packages of six tickets are sold for 25 cents; school children have half fares and workmen's tickets are sold at 8 for 25 cents. As everybody knows, custom has made the 5 cent fare for street railways well nigh universal in America, but it stands to reason that either this is too low a rate to give a fair return to the lines operated in small cities of few thousand inhabitants or else it is an unwarrantably high tax on the patrons of roads in the great cities.

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a true ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing in-veterate bronchitis, which is usually the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balms as a true cure, and only cure. Call upon your druggist for it.

NEWTON CEMETERY CORPORATION

THE ANNUAL MEETING SHOWS GOOD PROGRESS FOR THE YEAR JUST CLOSED—REPORTS OF THE TRUSTEES, SUPERINTENDENT AND TREASURER.

The annual meeting of the Newton Cemetery Corporation was held on Wednesday evening in the municipal court room, West Newton. There was a good attendance and Mr. Warren P. Tyler, vice-president, presided in the absence of Mr. Edward B. Haskell, the president.

The report of the secretary, Mr. E. M. Fowle, was accepted and placed on file and Mr. Otis Pettie, the treasurer, was then called upon for his annual statement relative to the finances of the corporation. A summary of the very complete and rather exhaustive report always incident to this official position showed these results.

Four hundred lots are now graded and ready for sale, about the same number as last year.

The report of the trustees for the year ending Jan. 1, 1894, was submitted by Mr. W. P. Tyler.

TRUSTEES' REPORT.

The trustees have to report a year of moderate sales. No new development in any one section of the grounds has been undertaken. The attention of the trustees has been mostly confined to the cemetery as a whole. Many of the avenues have been regraded, gutters paved, water mains extended, which have proved a great convenience. The grounds have been kept up to the proper standard of neatness and beauty. Considerable attention has been paid to the removal of old native trees and unnecessary foliage, giving more open spaces, letting in more sunlight, with more facility for neat keeping. We have, as has been reported, some four hundred lots graded and for sale. About the same as last year. Most of the iron fences have disappeared. A few old lots have been improved by regrading. There are a great many improvements which the trustees have in mind; they will be considered when the finances will permit.

The trustees fully appreciate the labors of our superintendent and those under him, in the interest they show in the care of the grounds. There is but one mind in the board, it is, to make the cemetery the most beautiful in our neighborhood. When we remember what it was thirty years ago, and know how hard a struggle it was to get it established, through economical management on the part of the superintendent and the trustees, we feel that Newton is most fortunate that it has within its borders so lovely a rural burial place.

There are many lots unprotected. The head of the family has been laid to rest; soon the family will be scattered, and no protection upon the lot. The trustees again urge upon those who have not perpetual care to consider the matter seriously. $775.00 has been placed under perpetual care on old lots, the past year.

The whole perpetual care fund, December 1893, is $93,006.13; amount rendered in last year's report, $81,036.78, gain for the past year, $2,969.35. This fund is invested in first mortgages. There was issued April 1st, 1886, $25,000, 5 per cent. bonds to run two years. These bonds were for the development of the cemetery, and to rid ourselves of a floating debt, caused mostly by the purchase of land. $22,000 of these bonds were sold. Three one thousand dollar bonds have been bought back by our treasurer, leaving $19,000 to be canceled. A sinking fund was established to pay them at maturity. This fund now amounts to $17,800.

The only purchase of real estate made the past year is a lot of about 7 acres adjoining the cemetery grounds, owned by Mr. Henry Ross, having a frontage on Walnut street of 482 feet, and on Homer street, 421 feet. There are four houses upon the estate. One on Walnut street is occupied by our superintendent; employees of the cemetery occupy the other three. The trustees had in mind in this purchase the protection of the cemetery. About 2 1/2 acres of the land is suitable for burials. This land on the two streets has been enclosed by a proper fence. This purchase has been made advantageously for the corporation. We have no floating debt.

About 54,000 feet of land has been given on the north-west side of our grounds, towards the development of the boulevard, as in time another entrance for the west part of our city, will, it is thought, be desirable.

The Bigelow "Memorial Chapel" and Conservatory have been renovated the past year. This chapel has attracted much notice. A duplicate is now being built by a citizen of Salem as a gift to one of its cemeteries.

One of our trustees, Benjamin Franklin Houghton, departed this life July last. There has been spread upon the records of the board a tribute to his worth as a man, and as a careful and conscientious trustee. He served upon the board thirteen years.

In behalf of the trustees,
WARREN P. TYLER,
Vice-President.

The selection of a list of gentlemen to serve as a board of trustees was the next business and Mr. Austin R. Mitchell moved that the chairman appoint a committee of three to retire and prepare a list.

This motion was carried and chairman Tyler appointed Messrs. W. C. Strong, Asahel Wheeler and H. A. Mansfield. After a few moments absence this committee reported through Mr. Strong the selection of the following gentlemen to serve as trustees. They were unanimously elected, Secretary E. M. Fowle casting one vote for the meeting:

Edward B. Haskell, Warren P. Tyler, James F. C. Hyde, Otis Pettie, Austin R. Mitchell, Francis Murdock, George Frost, Edward M. Fowle, James T. Allen.

Mr. Allen was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Benjamin Franklin Houghton.

Mr. Strong understood that the cemetery had consented to give 5000 feet of land to the central boulevard, and also a similar amount of land to the proposed southern route which was to be paid for. He was interested in the latter proposition and wished to make a motion that the trustees appoint a committee to fix the price on this land. The motion was withdrawn later as the chairman explained that a motion covering that point would be presented.

Mr. N. T. Allen moved that the trustees be given power to buy and sell land as they deemed advisable and for the interests of the cemetery. Mr. J. E. Nickerson on motion of Mr. J. E. Nickerson the meeting voted to extend the thanks of the property owners to the trustees for the efficient discharge of their duties during the past year.

Mr. E. T. Wiswall moved that the property owners approve and ratify the doings of the trustees for the past year, and the vote passed.

Mr. N. T. Allen wished that Superintendent Ross should have the thanks of the meeting as well as the trustees. All were glad that he had regained his health after his serious illness and trusted he had many more years to devote to the work of the corporation. He spoke of Mr. Houghton who passed away during the year just passed. He was a faithful, efficient worker with the trustees. The speaker had known him for fifty years quite intimately as a citizen and neighbor and had found him a friendly, cordial, kindly man. He was a man of more than the ordinary intelligence. He stood as a pillar in the community, a good, strong, upright man with opinions always influenced for the right. Everyone respected and placed implicit confidence in him.

Mr. Asahel Wheeler called attention to the neglect or apparent neglect of the trustees to report on the matter tabled at the last meeting, relative to the purchase of land for a crematory.

Chairman Tyler said the committee in search of a location called upon the trustees and found them favorable. A lot of land containing one acre was offered them, facing Homer street. They were satisfied with the proposed location, but after the Forest Hill location had been considered, believed it more central and easier of access and finally purchased land adjoining those grounds. Speaking in general of the matter he believed the change in the public mind would be a very gradual one. Cremation had a certain repugnance to a great many which it would be hard to overcome, and the idea of leaving one's dead in a beautiful place like the modern cemetery was very pleasant.

Mr. N. T. Allen believed cremation to be gaining greatly in public favor. When such people as Lucy Stone, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Henshaw and other persons of culture and refinement had believed in and exemplified their belief in this method, it set people seriously to thinking and tended much to rid the public mind of objection.

The meeting then adjourned on motion of Mr. Pettie.

NEWTON ATHLETES.

FIRST INDOOR MEETING OF THE N. A. A.

The first indoor athletic meeting of the Newton Athletic Association held in Elliot Hall last Saturday evening was well attended. There were thirty-one entries as follows: A. Miller, H. A. Benedict, J. A. Lord, F. E. P. Levi, F. C. Rising, L. W. Redpath, F. C. Hersey, Jr., A. A. Blanchard, E. H. Clark, F. J. Kellaway, W. H. Nash, W. D. Smith, W. C. Benedict, W. S. Fitz, R. W. P. Brown, R. M. Gardner, H. F. Cobb, B. C. Day, H. E. Hatch, C. Kimball, F. H. Twombly, R. V. Thomas, F. G. Blanchard, C. S. Bryant, W. C. Johnson, C. B. Cotting, A. L. Rand, W. R. Knight, H. D. Priest, R. E. Farquhar and F. W. Eddy.

The most interesting contest was the running high jump, with twelve entries. F. E. P. Levi made a record of 5 ft. 9 in., taking first prize; and E. H. Clarke captured the second, making 5 ft. 7 1/4 in.

In the 20 yard dash the 22 entries ran the event off in five heats. The final was won by T. J. Blanchard, in 2 3/4 seconds, and C. B. Cotting was second.

In the potato race there were eighteen entries. W. C. Benedict took first prize and H. F. Cobb second.

Of the three standing jumps L. W. Metcalf took first, covering 30 feet 7 inches; W. D. Smith, second.

In the lightweight sparring contest the best bout was between Hosmer Linder and W. I. Knight. Knight won the bout by some very clever work. The other matches were between the following:

W. C. Johnson against H. B. Forbes, won by Forbes; F. D. Bond against R. Bennett, won by Bennett; H. L. Bixby against G. F. Inman, won by Bixby; H. F. Hatch against H. L. Burroughs, won by Hatch.

The officials were: Referee, J. E. Morse; Judges, F. H. Hovey, E. B. Bowen, C. H. Wales; inspectors, F. A. Mason, E. R. Crane, W. W. Bond; timers, W. H. Pulsifer, H. F. Lesh; starter, Dan Dewey, Jr.; clerk of course, L. G. Paul; scorer, H. B. Waters.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

The thermometer registered 17 degrees below zero at places here Tuesday morning.

Mr. M. A. McAvoy has secured a position in a woolen mill at Lowell, Mass., as dyer.

It is rumored Mr. C. F. Ford, son of the Dudley Mills, has the offer to accept a similar position for a New York concern, which he may accept.

Rev. P. H. Callanan left last Sunday evening for the south in the hope of returning in better health. Fr. Keardon, his assistant, will officiate at services at St. John's church during his absence.

Box 17 was rung in for a fire in a dwelling house at upper Wellesley, Tuesday morning, but slight damage resulted. This was the first fire since the fire alarm system was put in in Wellesley and gave the firemen the direct location of the fire, which was easily extinguished.

The marriage of Mr. Jesse Ayres of this place to Miss Cora Reed of Auburn, Me., was celebrated at the latter's home Saturday evening, relatives and intimate friends of the connecting families attending. Both are well and popularly known here, and they have the best wishes of many acquaintances for a happy and prosperous future.

The minstrel entertainment held in basement of St. John's church last week Thursday evening, was a gratifying success. The affair was under the auspices of the band assisted by two artists at the business in Messrs. Frye and Swift, who caught the approval of a good sized audience from the rising of the curtain. The end men, Messrs. Sullivan, Frye, Swift, Matthews and Donlon with Mr. M. H. McAvoy as interlocutor. Between the vocal selections by different members of the band some good local jokes and hits by the end men were loudly applauded. To Messrs. Daniels and Sullivan of the Upper Falls are extended the thanks of the band collectively for helping the affair to success, also to Mr. Alf. Matthews as one of the end men who had much to do and remember and did it to the satisfaction of all. The affair concluded with a laughable farce entitled "The Colored Conductors." Mr. Frye's impersonation and stomp speech were well worth the price of admission and Mr. M. H. McAvoy in his Dutch specialty fairly surprised the audience and kept them convulsed with laughter during his rendition of "I am a Dutchman." Special mention should be given Messrs. Frye, Swift, Donlon and Matthews, end men. Messrs. McAvoy as interlocutor, and vocal selections and duets rendered by Messrs. Stover, Madden and Sullivan. The orchestra of seven pieces accompanied the singing and rendered some pleasing concert pieces. The affair is expected to be repeated at some date in the future not far distant. To Mr. Joe Hall, instructor of the band, who was instrumental in getting up the affair and rehearsing the new and inexperienced talent in their different parts is due a large share of the success.

WABAN.

Mr. and Mrs. Heaton and Miss Heaton after an absence of three weeks, returned home last Wednesday.

On account of the severe storm of Sunday evening, the regular Sunday service was omitted.

Our numbers are somewhat diminished at present through the absence of the Ellits, Goodwins, Rosences and Comers, who are all in the city for the winter.

Miss Margaret Strong gave a German for her friend in Village hall last Saturday evening. A large number of young people enjoyed the dancing and the favors were both appropriate and unique.

Mrs. Susan Campbell died at the residence of her son, Mr. Charles V. Campbell, last Friday of paralysis. The funeral services took place on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, and the interment took place on Monday at the family lot in Milton.

Mr. W. H. Gould has been very successful at cards, since the club was formed at the beginning of winter. At Mr. and Mrs. Childs' residence on Saturday evening he captured the first prize this being the third time. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Robinson will hold the positions of host and hostess next week.

Insect Pests.

The Newton Horticultural Society proposes to continue its work of ridding Newton of that most unseemly pest, the tent caterpillar, and offers to pay a bounty of $1.00 per 1000 belts of eggs.

Very gratifying results have been accomplished the last two years, and it is estimated that over 65 million eggs have been destroyed.

In the spring of 1893 a circular, to the citizens of Newton, was sent out asking for funds to help in the prosecution of the work and $179.00 was generously contributed, which was all spent in bounties, the city also appropriated $500 to free the trees from the public highway of this pest and to cut down all worthless trees which form a breeding place for this and kindred pests. They have appropriated $800.00 this year, and will continue the work. A circular will shortly be sent to the citizens of Newton, asking for financial aid and it is hoped that the residents of our city will keep up their interest in the subject and that a generous amount will be sent in.

The work of the Society has received much favorable comment from the press and individuals throughout the Commonwealth and many kindred societies in various places have adopted its idea and have reported very good results. The secretary of the society will send a circular containing in detail its instructions to all who apply for same.

The bounty is only open to residents of Newton and for belts of eggs collected in Newton.

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcutt, Kans.

STREET RAILWAY CONSOLIDATION

The numerous street railway companies of Newton, which have practically the same officers, directors and stockholders, will probably soon be consolidated, as there is a bill before the legislature asking for authority to make such consolidation. There can be no objection to this, as the roads are now practically one corporation.

The new company is to take the name of the Natick, Newton & Boston street railway company, and the incorporators whose names appear are Joseph E. Fiske, Joseph F. Wight, John C. Lane, Thomas
J. Kenny and Francis G. L. Henderson.
It wants authority to build and operate street railways in Natick, Framingham, Needham, Wayland, Marlboro, Newton, Watertown and Boston.

The capital stock is to be $350,000, and the new company wants permission to swallow and absorb by lease or otherwise the Natick & Cohasset street railway, the Wellesley & Boston, and the Newton-ville & Watertown, the Newton street railway and the Newton & Boston being excepted.

One peculiar thing in the petition is the section in which the proposed company asks for the right to carry goods, parcels and mail matter, which request should be carefully looked into, and if not stricken out, guarded by wise restrictions. We do not wish to see the streets taken up by freight cars, or anything resembling them.

Street railways for the conveyance of passengers are a nuisance in the streets, as everyone will admit, but many consider them a necessary evil, and so they have gained a foothold and are allowed to take possession of our streets, but the line should be drawn at cars for the conveyance of passengers.

There was a great quantity of street railway legislation asked for last year, but from present appearances the favors asked this year will beat the record.
Fortunately there are men in the legislature who will carefully scan the requests, men elected for that purpose, and among them is Representative Estabrook of Newton, whose experience last year will enable him to act independently, and with the confidence that his constituents will stand by him in his opposition to all improper schemes.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING.

The discussion in regard to the city's owning its own gas and electric plant has resulted in a bill which has been presented in the house, accompanied with a petition of the mayor of Newton, as authorized by vote of the city council.

The provisions of the bill will be of general interest, and they are as follows:

Section 1. The city of Newton may construct, establish and maintain within its limits one or more plants for the manufacture or distribution of gas and electricity or either, for furnishing light for municipal use, for the lighting of streets, parks, ways and other public places and public buildings and buildings owned and occupied by said city;
such plants may include suitable land, structures, easements, water privileges, stations, gasometers, boilers, engines, dynamoes, tools, machinery, pipes, conduits, poles, conductors, burners and other appliances and appliances for making, generating, distributing and using gas or electricity for lighting purposes.

Sec. 2. Said city shall not exercise the authority conferred in this act until a vote that it is expedient to exercise such authority shall have passed each branch of the city council by a two-thirds vote of all the members thereof, and receive the approval of the mayor.

Sec. 3. For the purposes of this act said city is hereby authorized to incur indebtedness payable in a term not exceeding thirty years, and to issue bonds, notes or scrip therefor, and the provisions of chapter twenty-nine of the Public Statutes of the Commonwealth and acts in amendment thereof or addition thereto, shall apply except so far as is herein otherwise provided.

Sec. 4. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

The committee on manufacturers will give a hearing on the petition at Room
A, State House, on Feb. 14, at 10:30 a.
m. There will also be a hearing at the same time on the petition of Edwin M.
Fowle, for an amendment of the law relative to the opening of streets for the purpose of laying gas pipes.

It is rather early to begin another election campaign, but that seems to be the only explanation of an order introduced in the board of aldermen, on Monday night. It was to the effect that every one taking a contract from the city must agree to employ only Newton citizens. With the new boulevards and the sewer extensions, there will be some very extensive contracts to be let this year, and such a condition would make it impossible for outside contractors to compete, and the work would cost the city about double in amount, to say nothing of the fact that enough Newton laborers could not be secured. The order, however, had a clause to the effect that such men should be employed

"when practicable," which of course destroys all its force and renders it perfectly harmless, as that leaves open a door wide enough to take in any kind of laborers. Such orders are presented in the Boston city council by the ward politicians of that city, to make themselves solid with the workingmen, but we do not think Newton workingmen could be taken in by such a very transparent device. If orders have a clause that nullifies them completely, it is difficult to see why they should be introduced and take up the time of the board of aldermen. The order was tabled, which is a harmless way of disposing of it. The past year has shown that any Newton men who desire work have no difficulty in securing it from the highway and other departments, and the same practice will be followed in the future, without any buncombe orders. Probably it was introduced more out of a good natured wish to oblige some of the local bosses than for any serious purpose.

The Board of Aldermen took summary action in the case of several members of the police force, at a special meeting, last evening, endorsing unanimously the action of Mayor Fenno in removing them from office. It is much to be regretted that such action was necessary, but Mayor Fenno will be commended for his determination to preserve the efficiency of the police force and to make the members feel that they will be held to strict account for their conduct. In the opinion of the police committee, radical measures were imperative, and the effect of such action can not fail to be salutary.
The fact that the board endorsed the mayor's action without any remarks, showed that they appreciated the gravity of the situation. A man whose duty is to enforce the law and preserve order, should himself set the example. The removed officers have been guilty of repeated offences, and have been treated with all the consideration that could be asked for. It was an unpleasant duty for Mayor Fenno, and also for the board, but public interests required them to act without any unnecessary delay. Experience has proved that to overlook an offense out of consideration for the excellent record made in the past is only mistaken kindness, and is apt to have a demoralizing effect on the rest of the force. The other officials will now realize where they stand, though, in justice to the great majority of them, it should be said that those needing such a warning are only a small minority of the force.

The proposition that the aldermen petition for a commission to consider the question of the abolition of grade crossings is meeting with great favor. The people generally are tired of the long discussions and the multiplicity of plans presented, whose only effect is to delay action, and it is more than probable that this delay is not unwelcome to the Boston & Albany people. If some terrible disaster, like the one in Providence last week, should happen in Newton, the board would be blamed by every one for not having taken decided steps long ago, and such a disaster is liable to happen any day. Let a commission be appointed that will hear all who desire to air their views, and then decide the matter, and the sooner the better. The longer the delay, the greater will be the difficulty in pleasing the people who are presented, without regard to their practicability.

The board of aldermen took summary
action in revoking the license of T. F.
Kelly of Nonantum, but is difficult to see what else they could have done, if they wish to have the laws respected.
The State Board of Pharmacy was to blame in the first place for not moving in the matter before the city council called their attention to it, as they have an agent who is supposed to attend to all such matters. The law is plain that the holder of a druggist's license must have charge of the business in person, and this Mr. Kelly did not do. The decided action of the board of aldermen will have a good effect all over the city, wherever the licenses are not strictly leaved up to, and there are said to be several such cases.

THE Newton Land Company asks in-

A BILL to provide for the improvement of Charles River is before the legislature, and its passage would do much for the territory between Watertown and Boston. It provides that the board of metropolitan park commissioners and the state board of health shall investigate and report upon the practicability and expediency of filling the bed and shores of the river between West Boston bridge and Watertown, contracting the bed to not less than 1500 feet, and of devoting a part to the purposes of public parks and selling the remainder.

The Newton Horticultural Society propose to continue in their efforts to rid Newton of the tent caterpillar, and prizes will be offered the same as last year. A communication in another column gives some details of the plans, and a circular giving full information will soon be issued.

THERE are petitions before the legislature for the incorporation of two trust companies, one to be located in Newton Centre, and one in Newtonville. The incorporators are prominent citizens of the two wards.

PRIZE DRILL AND DANCE.

JUDGES AWARD FOR THE TWELFTH TIME THE PULSIFER MEDAL—THE BANQUET AND DANCE.

The Clavin Guard, Co. C, Fifth Regt., M. V. M. gave their twelfth annual prize drill for the Pulsifer medal on Monday evening at their armory on Washington street, and the occasion was most gratifying to the boys and their friends, who were present to the number of 300.

The hall was very tastefully decorated with streamers of gaily colored bunting and Japanese lanterns, which contrasted well with the natural colors of the hall.

The program of exercises included a promenade concert at 7.30 o'clock by McKay's orchestra, which included these numbers: March, "Col. Bancroft;" Overture, "La Romana;" Solo for Cornet, Mr. W. F. Baker; Fantasia, "Village Life in Olden Time;" Concert, Waltz, "Symphony;" Finale, "Chain Lightning."

The prize drill followed and proved a very creditable exhibition, the squad being in command of Capt. J. Albert Scott.

The judges were Adjutant H. P. Ballard of Boston, Fifth Regt. M. V. M.; Capt. M. E. Morris of Natick, Co. L, Ninth Regt.; Lieut. W. S. Phillips of Cambridge, Co. B, Fifth Regt.

The squad was reduced to four men with honors very nearly even, a second trial being necessary to decide the merits of the work before final dismissal.

Judge John C. Kennedy presented the prizes in the absence of Col. Bancroft, who was expected.

He spoke very warmly of the excellent work done, which he doubted not had been excelled by no previous drill. The company as a whole was referred to in glowing words of praise and its influence for good in the discipline there afforded referred to. The Pulsifer Prize Medal went to musician Harry B. Inman; company prize, Sergt. Edwin F. Berry; honorable mention, Sergt. Robert W. Daley.

The floor was then cleared for dancing which was enjoyed until one o'clock, a collation being served during the evening.

The floor was in charge of Capt. J. Albert Scott, with the assistance of Sergt. Robert W. Daley, Corporal Albert L. Moriarty, Corporal Alexis E. Trude, Private John F. Powers, Private Harris E. Billings, Private Winfield Scott.

Among the military guests present were Capt. Henderson of the Horse Guards, Roxbury; Capt. Clement, Co. F, Fifth Regt.; Capt. Tolman, Co. A, Fifth Regt.; Lieut. Facey, Co. B, Fifth Regt.; Lieut. Cutting, Co. L, Fifth Regt.; Lieut. Whiting, Co. F, Fifth Regt.; Lieut. Murray, Co. L, Ninth Regt.; Capt. C. W. Knapp, Co. H, Seaver of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery.

The committee of arrangements were Capt. J. A. Scott, Sergt. R. W. Daley, Corp. A. L. Moriarty, Corp. A. E. Trude, Corp. F. A. Barrows, Priv. J. F. Powers, and the reception committee included Lieut. R. S. Cordingley, Maj. George H. Benyon, Capt. John C. Kennedy, Capt. Geo. C. Applin, Private J. I. Farwell.

Young Ladies' Charitable Association.

The Newton branch of the Y. L. C. A. are making preparations for a concert to be held in Armory Hall, Newton, March 29. In 1893 Miss Elizabeth A. Power, the president of the organization, realizing the necessity of a home for consumptives open to all without regard to creed or color, organized the association with about thirty members. It is now composed of 1000 members divided into twenty-two districts for the more practical fulfillment of the work. The object is the promotion of charity and benevolence among the sick and poor. In 1892 the organization became incorporated under the legal title, Free Home for Consumptives. The association purchased in March 1892 one of Dorchester's largest and finest estates at a cost of $24,000. The home is situated at 418 Quincy street, Dorchester, and is open to all consumptives whose admission is recommended by the investigators and physicians. All of its inmates enjoy religious freedom and may be visited by clergymen of their own selection. No pay patients are admitted.

It is the home of the people. Clergymen, physicians, firms and the public are at liberty to recommend applicants and as far as patients can be accommodated, are all welcome. The means of support are donations, proceeds of entertainments and the fund obtained by the members who are termed solicitors. Each solicitor collects ten cents a month each from ten contributors, thus each solicitor is responsible for one dollar per month. The president, under the direction of the corporation acting for the association, has control and management of the home. The matron, under the direction of the president, has the immediate charge of the home and the control of all nurses employed and patients.

The association not only supports the home, but care for the poor sick, all diseases in the district and whenever practicable, and the fund obtained by them in their own homes. The Newton branch have already sent to the home ten patients, destitute people who were dying with the dread disease. Clothing and food have been supplied to the poor and their children and many families can testify to the kindness and charity that have made their burden seem lighter by having their necessities supplied. Appeals are being constantly received for assistance and the proposed entertainment is to raise funds for this purpose.

Miss Powers will preside at a meeting of this branch next Tuesday evening at Room 9, Central block, Newtonville. All ladies interested in the cause are earnestly requested to attend and enlarge the branch. Were you to see some of the cases, destitute, homeless, weak and emaciated, they appeal to us and we have not funds to help them. Join and assist the poor and friendly help their name we appeal to you and feel confident if you could but realize their condition you would not or could not be selfish enough to refuse assistance. No one can afford to ignore these sad creatures.

Those that do not feel at liberty to join the association would promote the good work by purchasing tickets for the entertainment thus adding to the fund.

THE BENEFIT CONCERT.

A FINE PROGRAM AND AN ENTHUSIASTIC AUDIENCE.

The Benefit Concert, Monday evening, was a success in every way, enough tickets being sold to make a comfortable fund for the benefit of the poor children of Newton; the program was carefully chosen, and the selections were brilliantly given by the singers and musicians who gave their services. Mrs. S. B. Field, as the accompanist, was especially good and showed what should be the aim of the accompanist, in subordinating the instrument to the voice.

It was the first public appearance of Miss Estelle Andrews in Newton, and the audience grew enthusiastic over her perfect rendering of noble music, her sympathetic touch and her brilliant execution being equally remarkable.

The interest felt in Mrs. E. H. Cutler's appearance at the concert was shown by the warm greeting she received, and her selections were admirably given. Her voice is remarkably full and pure, and the perfect ease with which she sings makes it a great pleasure to listen to her. The "Lullaby" by Donnee, which she gave in response to an encore, was a perfect gem, it was sung with such feeling and expression.

Mr. Myron Whitney, Jr., has a fine voice, but he labors under the disadvantage of youth and a comparison with his father. He was very heartily encored, however, and gave a pleasing Italian song in response.

Mr. Dunham and Mr. Nowell were excellent as usual, and they are always sure of a hearty welcome from a Newton audience.

The program was as follows:

Piano Solo, a. Kammer-Ostrow, b. Fantasia-Improvisu, c. Minor, d. Miss Estelle Andrews. Bass Solo, Hunter's Song, Mendelssohn. Mr. Myron Whitney, Jr. Violin Solo, Second Concerto (op. 22), Wieniawski. Romance, and Finale a la Zingara. Mr. Willis Nowell. Tenor Solo, E. Sagesse, Mr. W. H. Dunham. Soprano Solos, a. "H.," b. Marginal, c. "I Love, and the World is Mine." Mrs. E. H. Cutler. Piano Solo, a. Au Lac de Wallenstein, b. Transcription of Waltz, and Scene from Gounod's "Faust." Miss Andrews. Bass Solo, "Don't Machree," Mr. Whitney. Soprano Solo, Beauty's Eyes (with violin obligato), Tosti. Tenor Solo, "I'll Sing the Songs of Araby," J. K. Payne. Violin Solos, a. Elvans, b. Hungarian Dance, c. Brahms-Jochim. Mrs. S. B. Field, Accompanist. The success of the concert was due in great measure to the efforts of Mrs. Cutler, who is greatly interested in helping the children of the poor of Newton, and the object for which it was given was such a worthy one that its success is well gratifying. The net proceeds will be about $250.

The decorations of the stage added much to the pleasure given by the concert, as it made a very pretty picture with its draperies of green and yellow, and its oriental hangings, kindly arranged by R. H. Stearns & Co., and the hedge of palms loaned for the occasion by Mr. J. J. Johnson, the Newton florist.

The Grand Opera Season.

It has been a frequent remark, emphatically made, and the same sentiment often appearing in print, regarding the company of artists assembled by Messrs. Abbey Schoeffel & Grau for the production of Grand Opera in New York, that no five cities in Europe at any one time in the history of Grand Opera could unite to offer so great and perfect an aggregation of foremost singers. This was and is a safe declaration, for as a matter of fact the assemblage is such that nowhere today can be found a company deserving the claim to be competent thoroughly, except in the case of this corps under this firm's direction. One or two artists—yes; but nowhere such a group of such consummate excellence. This same company comes to Boston for a two weeks engagement at the Mechanics Building Auditorium, beginning February 26th.

There will be several great artists, not yet personally known in Boston. The order of speaking of them denotes in no wise the order of excellence, for each is well nigh supreme in his or her place. Nor can any short paragraph do justice to any of the reputations they hold.

Mlle Emma Calve, a French artist of gracious beauty, has been termed the "Singing Duse." This means that added to a voice of superlative beauty, glorious training, she is an actress of the greatest strength. In emotional roles like Ophelia or the wicked fascination of Carmen, or as Santuzza, Mlle Calve has created a furor. She has a most grateful and beautiful personality, also, which wins for her immediate admiration.

Mme Nellie Melba was born in Melbourne, Australia. She is a woman of great beauty, a refined and musical face. Her greatest powers, and none are greater, are in the roles requiring strong dramatic power as well as flexibility, the Italian songs of Donizetti and the earlier Verdi. Mme Melba has renewed in New York, the glorious triumphs she made at the Covent Garden, the Grand Opera, Paris, La Scala, Milan, and, in brief, everywhere.

There should be no need to tell to Bostonians, or any of New England, of Mme Emma Eames of Mme Sofia Scalchi, of Mme Lillian Nordica. They have won all hearts by their individual excellences, by the magnitude of their gifts and the multiplicity of their attainments.

There are others, many others who might be named among the lady singers. It must suffice to say that every role in every opera will have a fit and able representative. Among the gentlemen, there return to us the incomparable De Reszke brothers, M. M. Jean and Edouard, the supreme artist, M. Jean Lassalle, among others now equally famous here as abroad. Among the new comers the musical world is elated over such grand singers as M. Pol Plancon, a basso of the rarest excellence, Signor Fernando de Lucia, a splendid tenor, Signor Mario Ancona, an eminent baritone and Signor

Francesco Vignos, another fine tenor, besides more than a half score of other distinguished lights of the operatic world among the gentlemen. Managers Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau have allowed no detail to pass without the best and most thorough attention. Chorus and orchestra will be all that the most exacting can wish. The musical directors have won immediate fame in this country. Sig. Luigi Macchietti and Sig. E. Bevilacqua. The ballet will be in charge of A. Francioli and will be all that could be demanded to present the operas here as abroad, with the appropriate introductions.

The subscription sale for season tickets has already reached enormous figures, a guarantee of the most thorough financial as well as fashionable prosperity and success.

The sale of seats for single performances will begin Monday, February 10th.

In Memoriam.

The directors of Pomroy Home desire to place the following testimonial on record.

In the death of our loved Superintendent, Elizabeth J. Robbins, the Home with its group of orphan girls has sustained an irreparable loss.

Born in the British Provinces, July 28, 1861, at nine years of age she came to this country with her parents, young sisters and brothers.

At the age of thirteen years, and immediately after the death of her mother, Elizabeth was received at the Pomroy Home, where her three sisters had already been placed.

The beautiful traits in Lizzie's character, were fostered and harmoniously developed under the wise training and elevating influence of Auntie Pomroy.

Attending the public school, she graduated honorably from the grammar department, and immediately assumed her duties in the Home for one year as in the custom with all the inmates of the Home, previous to going out to service.

Proving unusually competent she was retained in the Home, and at the death of Auntie Pomroy, Jan. 1884, Elizabeth was elected assistant superintendent, having the warm recommendation from Mrs. Pomroy, who remarked, "Remember Lizzie Robbins is pure gold. Always keep her in the Home."

At the resignation of Miss Boyden, Elizabeth was elected superintendent, which position she filled with credit and honor to the time of her death, coming closer to the children even than Auntie Pomroy. She had grown up in the Home. She knew the girls' needs. She had the tender loving sympathy, which a mere stranger or one less familiar could never feel. Withal she loved the children and was most anxious for their welfare.

It is difficult for an outside person to realize the silent, though strong influence which went out from her. She was so quiet, reserved, never self-assertive or aggressive in any way, consequently not fully appreciated by those who did not know her well.

Through all these years Auntie Pomroy has been her guide, her inspiration and beacon light to follow. Miss Robbins has been a true and good mother to the children of the Home. A wise sister and counselor to the girls and young women, who have gone out to take their places in the community. These came to Miss Robbins, as to an elder sister, in whom they could safely confide their troubles and their joys. In this capacity, the good she did cannot be estimated. Knowing the entire history of the girls, so far as it could be learned, she was enabled to counsel as none other.

Thus did her beautiful character manifest itself to the end. Only two days before her death, she went from the sick bed and room to listen and advise in a sorrow that had come to one of them.

Heavily the burdens have been placed on the too willing shoulders. Carrying these burdens for the children of the Home and its former occupants and bearing up bravely under one sorrow after another in her own family relations. The head and heart have been often asked over the perplexities. Often without the loving sympathy and appreciation she so richly merited.

We all remember the pure and Christ child life, which left us when little Faith Robbins died.

With loving hearts and tearful eyes her sister orphan girls of the Pomroy Home, join in response to the following:

Fold her, Oh Father in thine arms, And let her henceforth be A messenger of love, Between our human hearts and Thee.

State Board of Education.

At the meeting of the state board of education, Feb. 1, Frank Alpine Hill, principal of the Boston industrial primary school, was elected to succeed J. W. Dickinson, secretary of the board, who recently resigned his office.

Frank Alpine Hill was born at Biddeford, Me., in 1841. He is consequently 53 years of age. After graduating from Bowdoin College he became principal of the Biddeford high school. This position he held for two years, when he relinquished it for the principalship of the high school at Milford, Mass., in which capacity he served for five years. At the end of that he was called to occupy the same position at the Chelsea high school. Here he remained for some years till induced to accept the principalship of Cambridge English high school. At present, as has been intimated, he is the principal of the Boston mechanical arts high school.

Hill studied law with Hon. John M. Goodwin in his early years at Biddeford, but the schoolroom fascinated him more than the bar. He never engaged in the practice of law at all. He has been an occasional contributor to the public press and has been heard as a lecturer on scientific subjects.

In 1886 he married Miss Margie S. Brackett of Biddeford, by whom he had three children.

—who cannot understand the benefit to be derived from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Did you ever see a sickly woman with bright eyes, clear skin, and rosy cheeks? Or a healthy one without them? A woman can live in full health, do more work, have more pleasure, amount to more, by taking the "Prescription." When the bodily functions are not regular the woman is delicate.

As a support for nervous, exhausted, overworked, women, it's an invigorating tonic, a soothing and strengthening nerve; besides, it lessens pain. It's the only remedy for woman's chronic weaknesses and irregularities that's guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money paid for it refunded.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.
The Present Grades.
 The following communication has been sent to Mayor Fenn:

Newton, Mass., Jan. 20th, 1894.
 Dear Sir:—

The reawakened interest regarding grade separation in Newton brings into prominence the difficulty of harmonizing all interests under either "Elevation" or "Depression."

Would it not be well to consider the retention of the present grade of the B. & A. modeled under such improved conditions as to be acceptable to our citizens, and contrast the objections raised with those brought against both elevation and depression?

The changes suggested would be,— First: Carrying underneath or above the grade such streets as can be economically and practically so treated.

Second: Provide all streets remaining at grade with spacious and comfortable tunnels for foot passengers underneath the railroad so that stations will be accessible during passage of trains.

Third: Widened railroad location at stations through our city so that access to outward local track should be only by steps upward from the tunnels or downward from overhead platforms reaching the second story of stations. (This feature of second local track should be done under either elevation, depressed or present grade system.)

Fourth: Adopt the most improved gates and absolutely thorough methods of protection for such crossings as at Centre street, Newton, Walnut street, Newtonville and Washington street, West Newton, which streets would necessarily remain at grade.

The immense saving to the city of Newton, as well as to the Commonwealth and to the railroad corporation, is the principal factor in favor of retaining the present grade.

Two or three millions of outlay of which from two hundred to three hundred thousand must be paid by our taxpayers, would be a small estimate under either elevation or depression of grades.

Would such an outlay and the accompanying great inconvenience to travel be warranted when we consider that a new era of railroad may be upon us, possibly before the close of the present century. Today even methods of electrical propulsion for long distance rapid transit are being considered by our great trunk lines. The single rail elevated system finds favor with many prominent mechanical engineers and experiments are now being conducted near New York city upon the high speed single rail bicycle system. Facing the problems of inventive progress would it be sound judgment at such great expense to risk regret and dissatisfaction for years to come?

Very truly yours,
 (signed) WALTER U. LAWSON.
 To His Honor John A. Fenn,
 Mayor of City of Newton.

Felix Morris will be seen in three broad ly contrasting roles, two among them being seen here for the first time. First among them is "The Rose," a delight of one-act sketch of intense pathetic interest by Minnie Maddern Fiske, and in which Mr. Morris has been enthusiastically admired as Count de Rahan. The second in order is "The Vagabond," a one-act play founded on an incident in real life, and is from the pen of Kobes Heermans. "Moses," a bright, sparkling comedy farce in two acts, is an adaptation from se German, with bright lines and humorous situations. Mr. Morris will be seen here as a Cockney Jew, offering special contrasts to the two previous roles. Mr. Morris has been seen before in a number of character sketches. His life-like interpretations are marvellous. He is thoroughly original in all he does. The surrounding cast is in competent hands and the production will be complete throughout.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.—"Charley's Aunt" will inaugurate the seventh week of her nightly receptions at the Columbia on Monday night, and the delightful old lady seems to gain rather than lose her prestige with Boston-theatre-goers. The house is crowded at every performance and the advance sale extends over a period far in advance. The fun of the piece is fast and furious, but without the slightest touch of vulgarity or suggestiveness, and the humor does not depend in the least upon the horse play so common to most farces. The company is a most competent one and are fast becoming individual favorites with the patrons of the house.

How the Boston Women Sent It.
 (From the Buffalo Express.)

The telegraph operators were telling stories again last night. The tall man who has held a key all over the country had the floor. "You see a good many jokes in the papers," said he, "about the culture of Boston, and the habit people living there have of using big words and correct grammar and all that. Most of you think that these jokes have no foundation in fact. Now, I know better. I was receiving clerk in the Western Union office there a good many years ago, and some of the messages handed in to me were corkers.

"One summer I had the cable window. One day two women, dressed in black and greatly agitated, came in and inquired the rate per word to London. I told them it was 28 cents. They consulted for a minute, and then one of them asked for blank. I told them where the blanks were and one of them wrote a message. The other took and read it two or three times. Then she came over to the window and asked again how much it was a word to London. "Twenty-eight cents," I told her. She looked at the message dubiously. The other woman came up to her and said: "Don't you like it?" No," she said, "I don't like it. That form is improper. You said that Charles suicided this morning, when it should be said that Charles committed suicide this morning." "But," said the other, "if we put it in that way we will save 48 cents."

"The woman who objected turned this proposition over in her mind for a long time. Finally she said, 'I don't think that such syntax is excusable.' The other took the blank and read the message a few dozen times. 'We're poor,' she said decisively, after studying it in all its phases, 'and we can't save 28 cents any easier.' This partially convinced the woman who objected. 'But what will our friends think?' she asked, dubiously. 'I suppose they will notice it, but we can't help that.' Then the two women retired to one corner of the room and had a consultation.

"After talking earnestly for 10 minutes they wrote another message. So help me, this is the way I got it: 'Charles suicided this morning. False syntax used because it is cheaper.' And they paid me 28 cents a word for it. All of which," continued the tall operator, "illustrates one of the curious ways in which a woman's mind works."

—Over The Teacups.
[From the New York Recorder.]
Lulu—If you were thrown on your own resources and had to take care of yourself, what would you do, Eloise?

Eloise—Sometimes I almost wish I had to try it. It would be so exciting and queer. Then I know of a perfectly sweet profession.

Lulu—What is it?

Eloise—A rather superior woman keeps posted on current events. And swell ladies hire her at $5 an hour to sort of inject her information into them. It's perfectly lovely.

Lulu—The very thing for you, when you are so literary. I had the services of a lecturer like that last Lent—for penance. Don't you remember? It's very convenient. All the words and phrases stick in your mind from hearing them so often, so you can talk beautifully upon current subjects in society. And if the speaker has a good, even voice she doesn't interrupt you much; you can go on reading your novel quite comfortably.

Eloise—You might just as well engage me, Lulu, and save your money for charity. I know an awful deserving girl. Only 18, my dear, with blonde hair, who is just dying for a marquis ring.

Lulu—I would be only too glad to give $5 an hour to charity or anything else if I could get things straightened out in my mind. It's so hard to understand what is going on, don't you know, dear? It seems to me that there ought to be some sort of a key to the newspaper.

Eloise—That is one of your very best practical ideas, Lulu. You should get it patented.

Lulu—Who can possibly know what all this talk about the tariff means? What is a tariff, and where does it come from?

Eloise—Well—let—me—see. It is, I believe, indigenous to Washington.

Lulu—I've something to learn that much. All that I have been able to discover for myself is that it is a tariff on goods coming in from a foreign country.

Eloise—Well, if I may, let me explain about steel rails. We are about to make them free, so that everybody can have his own private railways if he wants to. Snatch this luxury from the railroad kings and place it within reach of the humblest mendicant.

Lulu—How eloquent you are, Eloise. It seems as though I just can't wait to see you in Congress.

Eloise—What else do you want to know about?

Lulu—Free raw materials. Who wants them free? The protectionists or the low tariff party?

Eloise—Oh, the protectionists. That is what I am; papa said so only yesterday. We ought to get everything for the poor for nothing that we possibly can because it is such a very, very hard winter.

Lulu—Well, if I may, let me explain about steel rails. We are about to make them free, so that everybody can have his own private railways if he wants to. Snatch this luxury from the railroad kings and place it within reach of the humblest mendicant.

Eloise—Why, my dear, you are all mixed? That was in Jacksonville. Don't you remember? Wilson was at the head of your side and Corbett of ours.

—One of the Paine Anecdotes.
A volume could be made of the good stories in which the venerable Henry W. Paine, who ended his long life here, is the central figure. Mr. Paine undoubtedly knew more law than many of our judges. He himself had declined a seat on the supreme bench of his native state of Maine and again when Governor Bullock tendered him the succession to Chief Justice Bigelow in Massachusetts. But he was not arrogant of his learning, and it is only as illustrating his perennial humor that the story is told of him, how, when seen reading a lawbook on a street car, a friend said, "What! Mr. Paine, you reading law?" "Bless your soul, no!" was the reply; "this is not law; it is a volume of supreme court decisions."—Boston Commonwealth.

—Curious whims are occasionally shown by readers at the Public library. There was a woman who regularly every Friday came for a volume of sermons. She did not mind whose sermons, nor what the subject, so long as they were religious discourses of some sort. Monday she would come back, return the sermons and take out a novel to unbend her mind until the next Friday, when the sermons would again be in demand. There was another woman who would never read anything but a religious novel, as she called it, not such a one as "Ben-Hur" or one with a particular religious tenet to inculcate, but a book with a clergyman as its chief character. Swinburne's "Heavenly Arcana" was read daily for years by an eccentric old gentleman. He would draw the book, keep it two weeks, return it with his place marked and call early the next morning to take it out again. He never took any other book from the library, and finally died, leaving his place marked as usual. There is one old man who will never read a book written by a woman. He reads good books continually, but will have nothing to do with a volume bearing a woman's name as its author.—Boston Herald.

—The storm of Monday night and Tuesday was easily the worst of the winter. The city teams were all out plowing the sidewalks, and the electric cars gave in trying to make regular trips, on account of the difficulty in getting their tracks clear. The through trains were all more or less delayed, but the local trains were on time. About 14 inches of snow fell, according to the Boston weather bureau, and it drifted badly in all directions. At the Centre street crossing there was a pile five feet high in front of Hudson's store, and huge piles were left about the railroad station, as the men shovelled off the platforms. Fortunately the snow was dry and light, or it would have interfered seriously with travel. The work of shovelling off the sidewalks furnished employment for a large force of men, and it was difficult to secure laborers in time to comply with the city regulations, but the authorities were very lenient and some of the walks are not cleared yet. There is a good deal of complaint also of the condition of the crosswalks.

—Mrs. A. R. Bailey gave a largely attended "At Home," Wednesday afternoon at her pleasant residence on Richardson street. The rooms looked very attractive with their decorations of plants and flowers, and the many charming young ladies in pretty costumes, who poured tea and coffee, and had charge of the small refreshment tables, scattered about the library and dining room. Mrs. Bailey was assisted in receiving by her sister, Mrs. Ireland, of Springfield, and some 300 guests were present from the Newtons, Brookline, Cambridge, Boston, North Easton, Somerville and Dorchester. Many of the ladies of the Appalachian Club, of which Mrs. Bailey is a member, were present. Other ladies who assisted in receiving were Mrs. Noiden, Mrs. Wing and Miss Fisher. The young ladies who poured were Misses Mabel Alden, Martha Wellington, Anna Whiting, Maud Whitney, George Emery, Isabelle Cole, Gertrude Russell, Hattie Stevens, Priscilla Alden, Bertha Drew, Edith Brown, Mabel Eddy, Carrie Brown, Belle Ballew, Elvred Monk, Helen Grant and Mrs. Everett Rider. one of the most pleasant social affairs of the season.

Different members of the Guild will read selections from the writings of Bishop Brooks and will relate incidents in his life. There will be violin music and singing, followed by a paper from Mr. Charles F. Rogers, Jr. The Guild extends a cordial invitation to all, whether members or not, to attend this meeting.

—E. H. Linder of this city, who is in the junior class at Harvard, was so seriously injured in a boxing contest, Wednesday evening, that he has since been unconscious and his condition is very grave. He was having a friendly bout with Arthur Foster, when the latter hit him midway between the chin and ear and in a few minutes he became unconscious. The doctors think the blow caused concussion of the brain. An operation was talked of yesterday but it was not performed as the physicians cannot tell exactly what is the matter. He has not improved and great anxiety is felt.

—Mr. Linder is very fond of athletics and took part in the Newton A. A. Contest in Eliot Hall a few weeks ago. At 9 o'clock this morning there was no change for the better in his condition.

THE NURSES' HOME.

DEDICATION EXERCISES OF THE NEW HOSPITAL BUILDING.

The dedication of the new Home for Nurses at the Cottage Hospital occurred at 3 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, in the spacious parlors of the new Home, which was crowded with friends of the hospital from all parts of the city, and many from out of town were present, including Miss Richards, the oldest trained hospital nurse in the country, and the founder of the modern training schools that we have today; Mr. Rice, president of the Quincy Hospital, and Rev. Dr. A. Dixon, president of the Beverly Hospital.

The beautiful Home attracted many favorable comments from the guests, all its fittings and appointments are so perfect. The building is of colonial style, with a large parlor on the right of the entrance, overlooking the hills of Waltham and the intervening country, and at either end of the parlor is another room, which can be opened into it, one being a reception room for the matron, and the other a lecture room for the pupils. On the other side of the wide hall is a corridor with nurses' rooms opening from it, and a bath room at the end. The upper floors are devoted to rooms for the nurses. The east rooms are known as the Palmer Memorial rooms, in memory of Miss Palmer, a former matron. All the rooms have hard wood floors, with rugs, and the woodwork is finished in natural colors. The furniture of all the rooms is of oak, and the expense of the furnishing was borne by the Ladies' Hospital Aid Association, with the exception of the parlors, which were furnished from the fund of $800 left in memory of Miss Palmer.

At the dedication, the rooms were handsomely decorated with cut flowers, many of them sent by the family of the late E. W. Converse, who with Mr. L. G. Pratt, bore the expense of the building.

The exercises opened with music by a volunteer orchestra, followed by the reading of scriptures and prayer by Rev. Wolcott Calkins. Then followed the formal transfer of the keys by Mr. L. G. Pratt.

MR. PRATT PRESENTS THE KEYS.

MR. PRESIDENT:—I have the pleasure to inform you that this building to be called "The Home and Training School for Nurses," is now finished, and ready for occupancy.

Before making the transfer of this property, it would seem to me proper that I should make a statement, showing how the erection of this building came about.

The work of the hospital had increased so much during the year 1892, that more room became a necessity, and it was decided by this want could be best supplied by building a home for the nurses, thus relieving the Hospital, and providing more room for the patients, in the main building.

Being on the Board of Trustees, and much interested in the good work the hospital is doing, I wished to do something myself towards its success, and having been appointed a committee of one to see what would be the cost of a building which would accommodate thirty or more pupils, I consulted an architect for the purpose.

Finding that the expense would be greater than I wished to undertake alone, I called upon Mr. Converse, and we talked over the whole question of the needs of the hospital, and the erection of a Nurses' Home. I finally said, "Mr. Converse, will you join me in this enterprise?" A few seconds thought, and his answer was, "I will, whom shall we have for our architects?"

We decided upon Hartwell & Richardson, and immediately applied to them for plans. The first plan was rejected, the rooms being too small and too few in number to answer for the growing needs of the hospital, and then a larger one was drawn, of which you see the result here today.

Thus far, the employment of the nurses for outside service, has added to the income of the hospital, and the call for such service has been so much greater than we could supply, that we felt justified in erecting a larger building than at first contemplated.

On the first floor, we have the large parlor, to be called the Palmer Room, to the right of this, a small reception room for the matron, and on the left, a lecture room for the pupil nurses.

There are also seventeen double and six single bedrooms, space for fifty beds, with four bathrooms on the three floors, making in all thirty rooms.

The building has been largely furnished by the Newton Hospital Aid Association,

CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE COMMON COUNCIL DISSECT THE ACTION OF THE HEALTH BOARD AND SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS IN THE MASON SCHOOL MATTER.

The regular meeting of the common council was held Monday evening at City Hall.

President C. W. Knapp presided and every member was present.

The records of the last meeting were read and approved and the first business taken up was the passage in concurrence of various petitions.

At 7.45 o'clock a hearing was opened on the taking of land for sewer purposes in the Barnes estate off Hunnewell avenue.

A communication was presented from Sarah E. Barnes, objecting strongly to the taking of the land because of permanent and irreparable loss in land values. She not only would lose the 10,400 feet wanted, but a back piece of land of 805 feet would be left almost worthless. The actual loss here would be $452 if the land were reckoned at 25 cents per foot and that did not include the depreciation in land adjoining. The remonstrant desired to meet the committee in conference. The remonstrance was referred to the committee and the hearing closed.

A hearing on the taking of land for sewer in Hunnewell terrace was closed without remonstrance.

Reports and orders from the aldermen were passed in concurrence until the order appropriating $125 for a fire alarm signal box on Bellevue street near Summit was reached.

Councilman Degen requested some explanation as he believed it was last year decided to pay only $75 for boxes.

Councilman Wing said the extra $50 was to pay for the wiring and connections.

The order was then put to a ye and nay vote and passed. Councilmen Tolman of Ward Seven and Degen of Ward Six voting against it.

The report of the board of health for 1893 was received.

Councilman Parker presented the petitions of Judge R. R. Bishop, et al., for a fire alarm signal box on Beacon street, near Grant avenue, also for a street light in the same vicinity. Referred.

A petition from J. Richard Carter and about twenty others for a plank sidewalk on Mt. Vernon street 275 feet long to cover the only poor portion of the sidewalk between West Newton and Newtonville, was taken under advisement by a reference to the highway committee.

Henry B. Day, et al., petitioned for a new street 40 feet wide to be laid out from Prince street. Referred.

Margaret Wade, et al., petitioned for a fire alarm signal box, corner of Dedham and Parker streets. Referred.

John H. Williams and thirty others petitioned for a concrete sidewalk near the truck house, Newton Highlands. Referred.

Wm. C. Wiswall, et al., petitioned for the laying out of a street 50 feet wide from Brookline to Dedham streets in the Oak Hill district.

Councilman Dickens in explanation said it was not a new street as it had once been laid out and only needed to be widened and completed. It would make a difference of 3-4 of a mile in going to Dedham or West Roxbury.

The petition was referred.

Councilman Weed made this motion: "That our clerk be requested to obtain from the city solicitor his opinion on the following question: Is it lawful for a member of the city council of Newton or for any city officer, elected by the people or by the city council, or appointed by the mayor and aldermen, to furnish labor, material, supplies, or work to the city, the same being furnished in the ordinary course of business or by contract. (See Chap. 208B Sec. 12, Public Statutes, and Chap. 117 of the Public Statutes for 1880, and paragraph 3 of Sect. 6 of the City Charter.)"

A SPICY DISCUSSION.

Councilman Parker of Ward Six at this time brought up a subject which has stirred the community of Newton Centre to its depths, and the after remarks showed conclusively that others outside that ward have become deeply interested in the matter, not because it affected them directly, but because the alleged negligence in one place might at any time be visited upon them if allowed to go unrebuked.

The speaker presumed that most of those present had seen the accounts in the daily papers and Graphic regarding the scarlet fever cases at Newton Centre, and continuing said they gave to outsiders a serious reflection on the board of health of this city.

The cases of scarlet fever were of a particularly malignant type and the three children who died were none of them ill over thirty-six hours. After the deaths occurred and the Rice school had been fumigated it was found that a girl who had been exposed had been in constant attendance at the Mason school. The local physicians communicated with the board of health and the chairman said there was no cause for alarm and that the scarlet fever was not needed. Several of the citizens came forward, so great was their anxiety in the matter, and offered to fumigate the school house at private expense if that stood in the way of the board. But the next Thursday the board fumigated the school house and reopened it the following morning for the last day in the week, Friday. While waiting for the health authorities to act, 60 per cent of the children were taken from school and in one room there was an attendance of only nine pupils. He understood that the reason for increasing the appropriations for this board of health recently, to three times their former amount, was to secure greater efficiency. This matter had not demonstrated it and he hoped there was some authority by which they could be censured with some effect. No parent caring anything for the health of their children would allow them to go to school under similar conditions and the citizens felt they had been treated very unfairly. He hoped some way would be devised by which a repetition of this nature could not occur.

Councilman Green of Ward Two had his attention called to the matter and had investigated it thoroughly. The scarlet fever epidemic originated in one family, a diseased boy from there being one of the pupils of the Rice school. This was a very mild case but the others were very violent. At this time a sister of the boy was in regular attendance at the Mason school. Now the statistics enacted for the State board of health requires the local board to keep a record of every contagious disease, with the name of the disease, its locality, name of person ill and the one reporting it; to give immediate notice to the school committee. If the school committee had been notified to some purpose he believed it their duty to have taken prompt action in the matter to guard against contagion and to allay the fears of the parents.

The regulations of the Newton health board in reference to contagious diseases, provide that every case that admits of removal be taken to the hospital for treatment, otherwise the premises shall be quarantined.

When the Rice school was re-opened after being fumigated, the same child, with the skin peeling from the disease, was sent to school and afterwards sent home. The regulations also require that any pupil coming from a household in which the disease has appeared must present a signed certificate from the board of health.

The Mason school, continued the councilman, has the largest attendance with the exception of the High school, in the city, and the anxiety of the community was such over this matter that the attendance dropped down to forty per cent. Notice was first given the board of health Monday morning by a local physician. He went to the school and found that a flannel skirt, upon which this child had been working, was, with other articles about to be distributed to the sewing class. The fact that flannel is the best material for carrying contagion led him to protest against continuing the lesson, and then at the solicitation of parents their children were requested to retire from the room. Two other physicians afterwards did the same. He telephoned to the hospital and to his home for Dr. Curtis before removing the children, failing to find him at either place but leaving word to be called immediately on his arrival. At noon he telephoned again and found the chairman at the hospital. After giving the facts and requiring that some action be taken at once, he was informed that no action was necessary in the opinion of the chairman, other than to destroy the flannel skirt.

This was hardly the way to annihilate the disease.

It was afterwards learned from the chairman of the health board that the superintendent of the schools did not think any further action necessary.

A copy of the school regulations was produced which said, any pupil who had been exposed to a contagious disease should be taken from the school and none should return without a certificate furnished by the board of health.

There was no question in the mind of the speaker that Superintendent Aldrich was fully conversant with the facts of the case and supposedly so with the rules of the school board in such matters, and he wished to submit to the council if that was the proper person to have in care of the children of the citizens of Newton.

The State statutes, the regulations of the board of health and of the school board, had been violated and his judgment had been placed superior to them.

This was not the only violation that had come to his notice and it had been hoped that with this board of health Newton would have the best of service. The former agent of the board was a man of large experience in these matters and he was one for whom it would be hard to find a superior, but the city council were told when the old board was disbanded that more efficiency was needed and could be secured. The only fault of the former agent was his inability to make enough friends. The council were told that a competent man could not be found to fill the position for the salary paid. It was urged before the board that a man of experience was needed, etc., and on that representation the city council voted to increase the salary of agent from $1200 to $1800.

He did not wish to appear as criticizing the present agent, but he believed the city had made a serious mistake in making this and other additional appropriations in this department, as illustrated today. The selection for agent was a wise one, leaving out the experience, but the understanding and representation was that an "experienced" man was necessary. He believed it better to follow the policy of selecting a man and increasing the salary if he was worth it afterwards. It was unjust to the council and to the citizens of Newton.

There were two things that should be done, returning to his main subject. Either more stringent rules should be enacted or those provided by the Commonwealth should be enforced to the letter.

Councilman Briston of Ward One wished to hear a statement from the agent of the health board.

Azet Brimblecom said whether the board acted wisely in their selection of agent was for them to say. Regarding the scarlet fever epidemic he went to Newton Centre early Tuesday morning on the request of Dr. May, who said he had lost a case, but knew nothing of the origin of the disease. This child was taken ill at four o'clock the previous day, and died at eight o'clock that morning. The house was placarded and the customary precautions taken. A day or so later Dr. Fessenden telephoned the sudden death of his daughter from scarlet fever. Both these children were in the same room at the Rice school. Dr. Curtis immediately closed the school, fumigated it Friday, washed it Saturday, and Monday it was reopened.

Dr. Fessenden soon after telephoned Dr. Curtis of the board that the cause of the disease had been discovered. The latter went to Newton Centre and quarantined a child of Mr. Woodman's at Mr. Frost's house on Cypress street, so Mr. Woodman could continue his business as newsdealer. The store and tenement above were fumigated and the Rice schoolhouse again fumigated. A day or so later the child was found to be back at Mr. Woodman's and was then quarantined on the third floor and the premises again fumigated. Later in the week Dr. Loring telephoned that a sister of the Woodman child had been attending the Mason school. This was before the board considered that they had no authority under the circumstances, for closing the school.

Councilman Greene asked how the fact of the flannel skirt being exposed to the disease, and being in contact with other work distributed to the children, could be reconciled to such a decision. Azet Brimblecom had heard nothing about the skirt.

Councilman Green said the fact that the flannel had been exposed was no small matter, and whether the piece of flannel was destroyed or not its contact with other things in the basket and passing through the hands of different children was sufficient to extend the epidemic. He also called attention to the opening of the school the next day after fumigation, when the fumes from the sulphur was so strong as to cause several children to be sick. It was the last school day of the week, and the few hours study which would have been lost if the school had remained closed to that forty per cent of the pupils then in attendance, would have been no matter of consequence and would have prevented several severe cases of illness, from which some had not yet recovered. He understood the school was opened that day by order of the superintendent of schools.

Councilman Degen said this was a very serious matter and that the new board of health fell far short of what could reasonably be expected of it. Their power was supreme in the matter but he wished to put on record the feeling of the council in the matter by offering resolutions. He moved a recess to prepare the same, which was taken.

The discussion during recess was just as interesting as while in session. It seems the final action of the board of health in fumigating the school house was brought about by the intervention of the mayor and a prominent member of the school board. The question was declared by one, to be simply on the comparative judgments of Dr. Curtis of the health board, or of the physicians at Newton Centre in the matter. Again the statement was made that even if no real danger existed as claimed by the board of health it was their duty as a public servant to allay, in so far as they were able, the feeling of alarm among parents in that community, by courteously acquiescing in a request so generally urged.

Upon reassembling Councilman Degen submitted these resolutions:

"Whereas in the opinion of the common council the action of the board of health in regard to the late outbreak of the scarlet fever in the schools at Newton Centre, has not been such as to inspire confidence in their judgment, it is therefore that we protest against their negligence in not promptly acting on the information communicated to them by the local physicians.

Resolved, that this council condemn the indifference of the superintendent of schools in not promptly ordering the closing of the Mason school, when the facts had been presented to him by the board of health."

Councilman Briston wanted a ye and nay vote as he was undecided in the matter. His motion was granted.

Councilman Savage wanted to know why where to lay the blame before putting the resolutions on the table, wishing to fix upon the right man before any censure was made.

Councilman Degen believed this was no time to single out one individual for censure. The chairman is the representative of the board of health in all such matters, and the superintendent, of the city of Newton, and very serious one, and the citizens and parents of Newton Centre feel justly indignant over the carelessness displayed in guarding the health of their children.

President Knapp resigned the gavel to Councilman Briston and took the floor. He believed in going slow and moved to the right to the further consideration, which was done.

The council then adjourned.

Street Car Extensions in Watertown.

As soon as the frost leaves the earth, the Newtonville & Watertown Street Railway Company will continue the extension of its tracks on North Beacon street as far as the Boston line. The West End Street Railway Company has secured a franchise from the four corners at Allston, through North Beacon street to the Watertown line, and it is expected that the line will be in operation the coming summer, when connections will be made from the Watertown line. Cars will be run from the Boston line, at the Watertown arsenal, through Watertown and Newton to Newtonville, where connections will be made and transfers given to the Newton and Boston line, which runs to the south side of Newton. The tracks of the Waltham-Watertown line, which now has a terminus at Cross street, Watertown, are to be extended to Watertown square and connected with the Newtonville line, and the Waltham cars will also be run as far as the Boston line.

together with the proceeds of an entertainment given by "The Players," a liberal subscription by Mr. E. W. Converse, Jr., and the furnishing of two rooms by Mrs. Haskell, and Mrs. Pratt.

Mr. Converse was an old and valued friend. We were both born in Vermont, the old Green Mountain State. He came to Boston early in life, and I afterwards met him, and then our acquaintance began, and our friendship has always continued. Our connection and interest in this work has been in every way most pleasant and satisfactory, and his death, so sudden and unexpected, and coming, too, so near the completion of our work, has been a great sorrow and grief to me, and we all miss his genial presence, when we had expected him here, to see the completion and take his part in the dedication and transfer of the building.

I have been much gratified that the eldest son of my associate, bearing his father's full name, has come forward so promptly, to take his father's place in carrying out the work so nearly accomplished. Indeed, the whole family have taken an active interest in the completion of this home, and in the hospital work, and will soon be ready to take the places of the older generation.

Mr. President, it now becomes my duty and pleasure, to transfer this building, through your hands, to the Newton Hospital Corporation, as a Home and Training School for Nurses.

In this, Mr. Converse, the son and legal representative of my late associate, joins me, and we hereby deliver into your hands, the keys of the building, which shall be a full conveyance to the corporation which you represent.

PRESIDENT LEESON'S REPLY.

MR. LUCIUS G. PRATT:—Since the beginning of the thought, which has been as this home, the president has been cognizant of its existence in your mind, and has watched its fulfillment with the deepest interest and pleasure. You have from the outset discussed so frankly and fully with the president this great boon to our nurses, that he has been permitted to interest to us all in connection with this most charming residence. He also has heard what has not been vouchsafed to yourself,—that is, the constant flow of thankfulness and acknowledgment from those who will immediately benefit by this graceful conception, and has listened frequently from their lips to words filled with such warmth of gratitude and appreciation as will ever be to him one of the pleasant incidents of this interesting labor.

We are all agreed upon the wisdom exercised in the selection of this elevated spot as the site for the home. Its distance from the hospital makes this house the more valued by those who will pass the restful portion of their lives while with us, within these precincts, and who will thus be enabled to procure that respite from the strain which comes from constant sight and sound of suffering. This can but increase the efficiency of our nurses, for as well as the capacity to enjoy its high responsibilities. In whatever direction the eye turns from this elevation, the charm of hazy distance greets the vision, and the varied landscape fills the longing for repose all ways grateful and necessary to the weary toiler in hospital wards. What an increase of strengthened hopes will spring from those who thus realize the blessing of this benefaction! Surely it will encircle the life of the one and the memory of the other donor.

This joyful day is tinged with that measure of sadness which comes from our yearning for the presence of that other donor, whose name is forever linked with your own, to be held in fondest remembrance by uncounted recipients of the wise bounty whose perfect fruit is this commodious home. Our absent friend has found, "That golden key That opens the palace of eternity."

To those toiling votaries of the faithful Guild whose life-work is an eternal ministry to others, these visible emblems of possession will always unlock the portals of this haven of rest; in this home nor class nor school of division will be known; here shall be kept "the key of all the creeds"; and thought, devotion, duty, the pass-words of admission to this secure retreat.

In behalf of the Newton Hospital Corporation I am privileged to receive these keys, never to be turned against the devoted members of the gentle craft which ever dispenses the healing balm to the weary and afflicted.

DR. ROBERT P. LORING of Newton Centre, then gave an address on "The Present and the Future of the Vocation of the Nurse."

While we meet today with emotions of pride and pleasure, to celebrate the opening of this home, the event takes on a certain sadness. We, as Newtonians, rejoice in this well equipped and beautifully designed structure, and we must express our sense of pride in the generosity of its large-hearted donors. Still, there is a peculiar sadness commingled with our happiness, for though we have with us the urban presence of one whose kindly beneficence we shall long remember; another, who has generously shared with him the responsibilities and obligations of this gift, is not here to receive our gratitude and affectionate appreciation.

Evidently, behind this munificence, was a profound belief and intention; a belief in the importance and sacredness of the work of the trained nurse and a desire to aid in surrounding her period of hospital tutelage with many of the comforts of home life. We see the wisdom of the motive and recognize the careful generosity with which it has been consummated.

This building, then, which we now joyfully, and yet, so sadly, dedicate to its noble purposes suggests our subject: "The trained nurse is the product of the hospital and it is impossible to understand the one without studying the other."

Dr. Loring then gave in brief the history of hospitals, as noted in ancient writings, which proved that they were known in ancient Egypt and India, several centuries before Christ. In the early days of Christianity caring for the sick became a religious duty, and since that day caring for the sick and the hospital has grown by a slow process of evolution. The work of Florence Nightingale in the Crimean war gave a great impetus to the development of scientific nursing, and "nurses and hospitals became objects of veneration."

The speaker then alluded to the work women have accomplished in the world, and the glorious possibilities offered to the young women of intelligence, high ideals and vigorous body, in the profession of skilled nursing. "The trained nurse becomes a member of a Sisterhood of Charity, such as the world has never known before." The good nurse must have aptitude for the calling, moral and physical courage, common sense, conscientiousness and to her duty and a high ideal of the sacredness of her calling, besides that which "we vaguely call magnetism in the individual, which is but strongly vitalized personality."

He then sketched the training received by the nurse in the hospital wards, and her education both by practice and by theory, and the instruction is followed by frequent and searching examinations by the matron and by the faculty.

He thought it would be an excellent thing for all young women to take a course in nursing to prepare them for the duties of motherhood, for which a careful preparation was needed, as for any other career. The Madonna spirit is divine, but it needs certain amount of previous training to be effective.

The speaker closed as follows: "As we approach the end of this discussion, let me say that we (physicians) feel that the trained nurse is not fully understood and appreciated, even now. The public does not fully realize that the training school is a technical school, an educational institution. The public has yet to learn that the work of the trained nurse is, in a degree, scientific, and while her vocation is a business, it is also a mission. Not often, we are glad to say, but sometimes, she is regarded as a sort of upper servant, with a certain amount of training for rather a disagreeable and lowly occupation. But we, (physicians) know our nurse. We appreciate the nobility, the sweetness, the strength and heroism of her service. Daily, we see her self-sacrificing devotion. We know the value of her work. She is becoming something more than nurse if that were possible. She is our Conduces, our sister, our noble work, and while sickness, sorrow and death shall last, the physician and the nurse, a consecrated duality, will labor, side by side, until the end."

As we leave the subject, let me give a word picture which symbolizes the whole life work of the trained nurse. It is to enjoy with you the anticipation as well as this splendid realization of your benevolent purpose. He has been a constant witness of the keen delight which you have experienced in the development of this idea, and has been privileged to share with yourself and your coadjutor, the consolation of many points of interest to us all in connection with this most charming residence. He also has heard what has not been vouchsafed to yourself,—that is, the constant flow of thankfulness and acknowledgment from those who will immediately benefit by this graceful conception, and has listened frequently from their lips to words filled with such warmth of gratitude and appreciation as will ever be to him one of the pleasant incidents of this interesting labor.

The work of Florence Nightingale in the Crimean war gave a great impetus to the development of scientific nursing, and "nurses and hospitals became objects of veneration."

The speaker then alluded to the work women have accomplished in the world, and the glorious possibilities offered temper of the time sought to embody itself in some practical form, until at last the hospital idea was born again into history as the child of Christian love.

It was fostered and cared for in the bosom of the ancient Catholic church.

Through the splendid organization of monasticism it was carried into every part of the Christian world.

After the Reformation the hospital out-grew the monastic orders and began to ask for recognition from the civil power. The state responded, and learning its lesson from the church began to provide for the health and comfort of its infirm and helpless classes.

In every monastery there was the infirmary, second only in importance to the church with its altar and crucifix. Here could come the sick and wounded of any race or religion and receive the tenderest nursing and the most skillful treatment that the medical knowledge of the time could furnish.

These were the oases of peace and health amid those dreary centuries of pestilence and war.

In the course of time there dawned the 18th century, so full of new conceptions of the world, of man and of God.

Every department of thought felt the premonitions of the great revelations to come. Everywhere there came in a deeper sense of the value of the individual, and a keener regard for the neglected remnants of society.

Then there followed that great movement of hospital building, which for munificence and noble earnestness has never been surpassed.

That movement has never ceased. All over England and on the Continent church and state vied with each other in raising up dispensaries and asylums for the masses of people whom poverty debarred from the highest medical skill.

Through all the years since then practical philanthropy has kept pace with the broadening of the mind and greatening of the heart.

This movement has gone on until today in every great city, over against the harsh gong of the patrol wagon you may hear the merciful music of the ambulance bell, and in every large town in contrast to the jail, where the law dispenses its stern penalties you will find the hospital, where skillful mercy binds the wounds, and the fevered and the dying find the flush of health into pale and sickly faces.

This is the story of the hospital idea, and there is no fairer page in all history than that which tells how through twenty centuries, little by little the strong have learned to help the weak and love has built itself into a habit of health and cheer for the victims of sickness and pain.

And now with this brief historic sketch as a background, I want to delineate some of the moral influences which a hospital sheds upon the community in which it is placed.

Let me take our own hospital as a type. Here is this institution, built by the generosity of the people and supported by contributions from the churches and from various private and public sources.

It is conducted on the most approved sanitary principles and is under the management of skillful physicians and trained and devoted officers.

Its doors stand open to all our people without distinction of race or worldly fortune. Now what are the moral values which it creates in our public life?

In the first place, it is carrying the lessons of cleanliness and order into abodes where headless poverty prevails and sanitation is unknown.

Underneath the washed and thrifty levels of society there is a substratum of squalor and improvidence.

Here are the breeding places of disease and immorality. Here live people who are unfamiliar with the standards of wholesome living, who are ignorant of the simplest laws of health, and whose low ideals foster a fatal contentment with their evil surroundings.

Now it is safe to say, I think, that a considerable number of the patients who pass through our hospital belong to this class.

During their detention here they are taught obedience to the rules of personal cleanliness; their ears hear only gentle voices; their eyes see only kind faces and the comforts of pure and orderly living.

Such an experience, however brief, is worth infinitely more than all the staccato instructions of the law officer.

Now ideals are implanted, a wholesome discontent is aroused, and taking these lessons of the hospital life back to their homes, quite unconsciously to themselves perhaps, they begin to practice them in their domestic relations.

Thus something of the tonic spirit of the hospital is working its way back all the time into these ignorant and degraded quarters of society.

Strictly speaking, these influences are only physical and external, but we all know that clean, orderly habits of life furnish the most congenial atmosphere for the graces of morality.

When the fire bell rings next to godliness, but the one often grows out of the other.

It is too late to quarrel with the old saints who made foulness a virtue, but it is not too late to recognize that among the chief agencies of regeneration are soap and water.

All our modern experiments in social ethics are teaching us that to reform the lower levels of society we must work on the outside as well as on the inside, we must furnish the cheerful environment and awake in them a love of outward decency, as we secure them upon the beauty of holiness.

And I believe the hospital is doing just this kind of work.

In ways that we cannot see, and in a measure that we cannot estimate, it is sowing in these obscure places the seeds of a sanitary reform, which will blossom at last into self-respect, good habits and a moral earnestness of living.

Then again, the hospital that is supported largely by the various churches of a community, acts as a peacemaker among discordant theologies.

It unites the various Christian sects in one specific, common cause.

When the fire bell rings all men run to put out the flames.

They do not pause to ask one another's creed.

They are all brethren meeting to save a brother's property. They are co-operating for helplessness.

Here is a hospital organized for fighting pain and disease, and when the call for help comes from all the churches of the city, without regard to size or creed, rush together with their contributions in answer to that call.

For one Sunday in the year, at least, they stand side by side, thinking the same thoughts, feeling the same influence, working for the same end.

It is a new bond of union. The silken cord of charity encircles them all and makes them members of one body. Now I regard this as an excellent way of introducing the Christian denominations to one another.

Half the hostilities of life are due to ignorance.

A better knowledge of our points of agreement soothes the quarrelsome disposition of our differences.

The best way to get acquainted is along the lines of feeling.

The deepest friendships are founded on the heart. The true way to harmonize our churches is under the inspiration of some common emotion.

We do not want any other kind of harmony.

We do not want to surrender our creeds. We do not want the dead level of intellectual agreement.

But what we do want is a true to all sections feeding in the presence of human need and suffering.

There is no denominational way of feeding the hungry. There is no church way of setting a broken limb or reducing a fever. There is only one way to love your neighbor and that is to love him as you love yourself.

What we want then, is not the moral force of the community lost by being split up on theological lines, but the power of all sects massed together in those moral causes, where theologies have no right to be. This is about as near to the millennium as we can hope to get for sometime to come.

And I believe that this hospital of ours is helping to realize for us that millennial ideal, by covering our denominational differences with the mantle of a common charity, and by teaching our churches to be friends for humanity's sake.

Again, this hospital standing in our midst is a symbol of man's love for man. It is a sermon in wood. It is a movement, silently preaching to the eye the gospel of human helpfulness.

Symbols are embodied ideas, ideas visible and tangible. Their power no man can measure. They have led armies, they have inspired great moral movements, they have shaped a nation's destiny, they have changed the currents of history.

Go to Boston Common and you will see the image of a soldier standing upon a lofty column.

What does it? It is not a great work of art, but it symbolizes and the way of struggles for human freedom in history.

It tells with mute emphasis the story of the slave, of a divided country, of the call to arms, of fierce battles in a southern clime, of a million nameless graves, victory at last, of one flag north and south and slavery gone for ever.

And every school boy passing that silent statue unconsciously learns the lessons of liberty and patriotism.

And so with equal power, I believe, this hospital is quietly moulding the characters of us and our children. It stands among us as a symbol of philanthropy. It stands for public generosity, for personal sacrifice, for sympathy with suffering, for the unstinted service of busy physicians who give themselves to its work without a thought of ordinary reward.

It represents to all who come and go the spirit of these modern times, when human love and clear-eyed science meet to banish pain and make life a sweeter, fairer thing for the children of the earth.

And I think it is no exaggeration to say that simply the silent presence of an institution like this appeals to the imagination of each new generation and forces in upon its mind the noblest ideals of human service.

One other moral lesson this hospital is teaching throughout the community.

It is forever pressing upon our hearts the duty of unselfishness in giving.

It is educating us in generosity, by its earnest and continuous appeals for help.

It is not fewer calls of charity, but more, that open our hands and enlarge our hearts.

Is it not true that the fact of human need has created the virtue of sympathy and unfolded the moral beauty of the generous spirit?

In answering the prayers of another's want we win the graces of a higher life.

The cry of the weak ones of the world is forever exhorting and strengthening the nobility of the strong.

And so the institution that is dependent upon the gifts of the people, in turn cultivates in its benefactors the spirit of charity and benevolence.

It is sometimes urged that the hospital ought to be supported out of the public funds.

I concede the advantages of that method in the case of large institutions in a great city, but I should be sorry to see it adopted in communities like our own.

The moral tie between the hospital and the hearts of the people would be severed. The moral influence of the institution upon the sympathies of the citizens would be destroyed. For public funds are the fruits of taxation and we all know that men do not pay their taxes in the generous and philanthropic spirit. There are no sentimental associations connected with the assessor's office.

If the hospital were in the hands of the city, as he folded up his tax receipt, would even stop to consider that a part of his money had gone to help the cause of sickness and distress.

The reflex influence of voluntary giving and the sentimental power of voluntary responsibility would not come with their blessings; and that is a loss that none of us can afford to undergo.

Here then is this hospital which we have created, and which we have pledged ourselves to maintain. It is doing an ever wider and nobler work. We believe in it. It is dependent upon our bounty. It is appealing to us every day for help and support. It is the child leaning on the parent.

And what I urge is that through this tie of dependence, by these frequent appeals to our benevolence, it is educating the community in the ways of sympathy, stimulating the spirit of unselfishness and lifting us all up into a broader, kinder, more generous manhood and womanhood.

We have come here today to dedicate this beautiful building to the noble ministry of nursing the sick.

As it stands here in its completeness it serves as one more illustrious example of that benevolent spirit, which through all time has been slowly redeeming mankind from indifference and selfishness.

It will remain through the years as a fitting memorial to those large-hearted benefactors of the past, who have made it possible for us to see it also. Within these walls there will abide a sisterhood of young women consecrated to the old-time mission of mercy, but equipped with the knowledge and skill of these modern days.

Through these door-ways they will pass out into the world, exemplifying once again the moral influence of the hospital as they enter our homes and with patience and gentleness and self-control, nurse our loved ones back to life.

We welcome this new sisterhood into the circle of noble professions.

We accept this building in the name of the cause for which they stand.

But as we dedicate it to this special mission let us not forget that we are thus adding one more link to that chain of moral forces, which is slowly girdling the world and which is more and more bringing in that Kingdom of which the son of man so fondly told.

The exercises closed with the benediction by Rev. Mr. Calkins, after which the guests were at liberty to look over the building.

Among the last gifts received was a handsome French clock, from the wife of the Hospital physician, which has been given a place in the Palmer Memorial rooms.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. Woodruff, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it struggling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

REDUCED RAILWAY FARES.

An announcement that will interest all citizens of Newton is made by the counsel for the Boston & Albany railroad, which is that fifty ride tickets books have been prepared and are now for sale at the suburban stations, at the same rate as the 100 ride tickets. The recent enforcement of the rule that the book itself must be presented with every coupon has caused a great deal of grumbling, as by this rule every member of a family had to have a ticket book in order to secure the advantage of the reduced rate. The rule of course was of great advantage to the railroad company as the books had to be paid for in advance, and the company thus had the use of a very large sum of money before it was earned. This concession will be gratifying to the thousands of patrons of the road in Newton, and the directors might have made an even greater concession without doing anything remarkably generous.

They might have voted to offer ten ride tickets at a small advance on the price for fifty ride tickets, instead of as now charging nearly three cents a ride more. Many people can not afford to spare the money for a hundred ride ticket, and they thus have to pay more than their richer neighbors. The new rule about fifty ride tickets will be some relief, but not as much as could be given without loss to the road, save that they would lose the use of the money thus advanced for tickets.

At the hearing on Mr. Estabrook's bill for a 2 cent per mile rate, Mr. Hoar, Counsel for the Boston & Albany, said that between 55 and 60 per cent of the travel on the road is within the 10 mile limit and the rate per mile there is 1 cent. He evidently did not include Newton in his calculations, as Newton is only 7 miles out, and even with the hundred mile ticket rate the cost is 5.75 cents, by the cent ticket rate it is 11.7 cents, and by single ticket 18 cents and at any of the other stations the same relative rates rule.

But it is between the Newton stations where the most excessive rates are charged. It is 5 cents from Newton to either Newtonville or West Newton, one and two miles, respectively; 7 cents to Auburndale, 3 miles; 12 cents to Woodland, 5 miles; 18 cents to Newton Centre, 9 miles. For ten ride tickets the rate is about two cents a mile. Such excessive rates are practically prohibitory, and yet the Boston & Albany had rather dump empty cars around the circuit than to sell tickets at such a reasonable price as would increase the travel between the different sections of the city.

Judging from Mr. Hoar's statement that the average rate for suburban traffic is 1 cent a mile, tickets must be sold at some station outside of Newton for less than that rate, and yet we have been able to discover no such place.

Some idea of the immense business done by the road in Newton can be gained from the yearly receipts of the stations. The Newton station receives from its Newton patrons some $140,000 a year; and Newtonville and West Newton about $100,000; while Auburndale, Newton Highlands and Newton Centre will average over $60,000 each, and this does not include the large number of tickets for the Newtons sold at the Boston station. With the great number of single ride tickets, and ten trip tickets that are sold, the average rate Newton travellers pay would be a good deal more than one cent a mile, as we reckon it.

Mr. Hoar also stated that the road now receives for all its traffic an average of 1.83 cents a mile, and if this is so it is difficult to see why he should say that if Mr. Estabrook's bill passes for a rate not to exceed 2 cents a mile, the road will have to reduce the wages of its employees. That is the old familiar bluff employed by all corporations, whenever their profits are threatened, and it is an excuse corporations are always eager to avail themselves of, in spite of their great professions of love and affection for "the poor laboring man."

How would it do for the Boston & Albany to cut down its extra stock dividends, and its yearly addition to surplus account, and the other ways in which it manages to keep its regular dividends down to 8 per cent? This might be just as well as to take it out of its employees, who are none too well paid at present, as no one has ever accused the Boston & Albany of paying more than the market price for labor.

It is, however, not at all probable that a reduction in the rates of railway fares would lessen the profits. In the great majority of cases such a reduction means such an increase of travel that the profits are increased rather than lessened.

Take the case of travel between the stations on the line between Newton and Chestnut Hill. The rates are now so high that no one patronizes the steam cars if he can possibly avoid it, and the result is that the circuit trains between those points consist mainly of empty cars. It would cost no more to haul these cars if they were filled with passengers, and if a low fare was granted between Newton stations, the cars would be well patronized and the receipts would mean a clear gain to the company. It is said that Newton owes a good deal to the Boston & Albany, but the converse is equally true, that the Boston & Albany owes a great deal to Newton, and its citizens would not object to a little more generous treatment from that corporation in the way of reduced railway fares.

THE WEST NEWTON BOULEVARD.

At the hearing before the highway committee Tuesday evening, Mr. Strong of Waban presented a petition in favor of a so-called "southern" route for the West Newton section of the boulevard, a route in the vicinity of Mr. Strong's property and running near the low lands on the northern side of Waban Hill.

In the interest of the tax-payers of the city whose money is to pay for the boulevard, we hope that the committee will not adopt this new route. The boulevard, as thus far laid out, runs as a rule, through high lands which will immediately be available for building purposes, and the city will soon get a return from its investment from the increased valuation of the land developed. The land along the West Newton route proposed by Mr. Strong is remote from the settled portion of the town, is in great part low and spongy, and will not be used for residential purposes for many years to come, until the higher lands nearer the settled portion of the town have been taken up. As a consequence the money expended by the city will be tied up for an indefinite time without any considerable return. This is in direct conflict with the business principles which have governed the laying out of the boulevard hitherto.

That this "southern" route offers great attractions from the point of view of the landscape gardener, has already been recognized by our boulevard commission, who, in their very able report, recommend that the low land and waterways in this neighborhood be taken sometime for a "Park" but this recommendation is entirely distinct from their prior recommendation in the same report of a boulevard along the higher lands which are suitable for building purposes. The two plans should not be confused nor should the "Park" be made before the boulevard. The former was favored by the commission as desirable in the future to preserve for the city the natural waterways for surface drainage and to protect the city from the possibility that the low lands, undesirable for residential purposes, might be put to improper or unhealthful uses. The latter was designed to connect the various villages along its route with Boston by a reasonably direct road, and to open lands whose speedy development would yield in taxes a return on the investment. Let the two plans be kept distinct and let us have the boulevard first and quickly.

THE NURSES' HOME.

The beautiful new Nurses' Home at the Newton Hospital was dedicated with appropriate services on Wednesday afternoon and a full report of the proceedings will be found in this paper, together with a picture of the building.

The building itself is large and commodious, and being located on the high ground in the rear of the Hospital, presents an imposing appearance, and its windows command a beautiful view over a wide expanse of country.

The building is the generous gift of Mr. L. G. Pratt and of the late E. W. Converse, and has been constructed in the best possible manner. It will add largely to the accommodation of the Hospital, as the rooms formerly occupied by the nurses can now be used for private patients, and the number of pupil nurses can also be increased. The interest which Mr. Converse has always taken in the Hospital has been inherited by his family and marks of their interest in the decoration and furnishing of the parlors were noticed at the dedication exercises.

The Ladies Hospital Aid Association, as usual, proved its interest in Hospital work by generously taking charge of the furnishing of the nurses' rooms, and other gifts were mentioned by Mr. Pratt. The Home will ever be a worthy memorial to the two citizens whose generosity provided it, and whose kindness will always be felt by those upon whom come the heaviest burdens of the Hospital work.

The city council are making a determined effort to find out the propriety and also the legality of a city official taking contracts from the city. Both branches have introduced resolutions to refer the matter to the city solicitor, and even if he decides that there is no illegality in the case under consideration, yet it cannot help striking the ordinary person as an improper proceeding. In the case which has brought up all these questions, that of Mr. Fanning, the overseer of the poor from Ward Five, it appears from the City Auditor's books, that he receives several thousands of dollars yearly from the city, mainly for work on which no bids are asked, and he receives the work by the favor of another city official. A year ago, the thing was considered so improper that another man was chosen from Ward Five, and he served so satisfactorily that it was supposed by the alderman from that ward and by others that he would be re-elected, but when the votes were counted it was found that some one had outdone him with such success, that Mr. Billings was defeated, and those outside of the ring are still wondering how it was done. It would certainly seem as if there were good men enough in the city, whose business is not dependant upon city patronage, to fill the city offices.

POSTMASTER STACEY of West Newton has been reappointed by the President. There has been a good deal said about the prevalence of the spoils system in this state, but here is a case in which the facts are all known, and the people can judge for themselves. Mr. Stacey was originally appointed by President Hayes; he has made an excellent official, and the patrons of his office by a great majority desired his reappointment. Some of the Democratic politicians of the city thought that their party was entitled to some of the spoils, in which respect they do not differ from Republican politicians, and they made a strong effort to get their man appointed. But the office has not been in politics during Mr. Stacey's administration, and it was wisely decided that it should not be made a political office now. Mr. Quincy gets the credit for all the appointments in the state, according to his critics, and therefore it is only just to give him credit for this instance of fidelity to civil service reform principles. Newton postoffices should have no connection with politics, and the appointments so far made by President Cleveland show that that is the opinion of both himself and those who advise him.

THE Common Council had a rather stormy debate on the action or rather lack of action by the school board and the board of health in the scarlet fever cases at the Mason school at Newton Centre. The citizens there feel very deeply on the matter, as is natural they should. Parents think the health of their children is of much more importance than one or two days of school, and that the most extreme precautions are none too great when such a serious disease as scarlet fever is in question. From the parents' point of view, a child had better lose a whole month of school than run the risk of losing its life.

A school is not an army, where the officers regard the success of their cause as of more importance than the lives of a few soldiers, and it is a mistake to insist too strongly on military exactness. The feeling of the citizens of Newton Centre was plainly set forth by Councilmen Degen and Parker.

The last issue of the Boston Sunday Post, all the work on which was done by women, was a very entertaining sheet, and was the favorite with all the readers of Sunday papers.

THERE were 323 marriages in Newton during 1893, and of these 154 of the grooms and 150 of the brides were native born, and 160 grooms and 173 brides were foreign born.

Musical and literary program was presented followed by an address by Grand Deputy E. D. Clark. Dancing began at 9 o'clock with a grand march and circle. Music was furnished by Harris & Stokes orchestra. Mr. F. K. Clark was floor director, assisted by Messrs. W. A. Clark, F. M. Dutch, M. E. Beardsley, L. B. Peterson, Chas. Florence, A. S. Kimball, G. P. Rice, E. B. and A. E. Sturum. A generous collection was served in the banquet hall.

—Miss Mariana C. Porter gave an interesting and scholarly paper before the West Newton Woman's Educational Club last Friday afternoon, on "James Russell Lowell," dwelling particularly on his poetry, his humor and as a patriot who devoted his remarkable mental gifts to his country. Among his most finished productions she dwelt upon his "Commemoration Ode" delivered at Harvard College. At the close of the paper Miss Porter read some humorous selections, and by special request, Mrs. Jaynes read the Commemoration Ode.

—There was a large attendance at the entertainment given by the Ladies' Home Circle, at the Unitarian church parlors, Wednesday evening, and the program proved a highly enjoyable one, many of the features, especially "Grandma's Album," being warmly applauded. Mrs. Wm. Lodge exhibited a fine piano solo, had 23 pictures, supposed to represent her relatives, former beaux and friends, and as the pages were turned pictures appeared, represented by members of the Circle, in costume, and the whole was very interesting and amusing. Miss Emerson, who was to sing, was detained by illness. Mr. J. Herbert Park sang so pleasingly that an encore was demanded and given. Miss Ella M. Hove's piano solos were finely given, and Mr. Clifford A. Bentley's readings proved very enjoyable. The entertainment concluded with the very amusing comedy "A Pick-up Dinner," in which the parts were excellently taken by Mr. Charles W. Cole, Miss Emma Nickerson and Miss Alice Thatcher Reed. The ladies can congratulate themselves on the success of their efforts to entertain the public, and they netted a very satisfactory sum from the proceeds.

—Who is my neighbor? Using this as the text of his sermon, Rev. Mr. Priest gave a very instructive discourse at the Universalist church last Sunday. In graphic words he showed how, from the kind deed of the good Samaritan, had grown the societies for doing good which have done so much to help humanity. Who is my neighbor, takes a very wide and far-reaching meaning when applied to daily life, and we touch again and again circles that at the outset seem to have no relationship with us. We are bound together into one common bundle of sticks, and you and I are part and parcel of that package. One cannot tear himself away without damaging all the rest. We are to remember that all are not leaders, but that the world is made up of leaders and scrappers who make up the volume of sand and the background of life, even if not in a conspicuous position. We hear of a great fire in some distant city and hardly stop to realize that you and I are paying some portion of that loss. We forget that the insurance companies take your money and mine to help make good the loss that has wiped out of the world some portion of its visible property. We are to remember that the all-sharers that all share, and that any injury to our neighborhood goes on and on, we know not where it may stop, and is a damage in some way to every man who breathes. So we shall have to give more time to it next Sunday.

THE NEWTON CAMERA CLUB.

THEIR ANNUAL EXHIBIT OF PHOTOGRAPHS.

The second annual exhibit of photographs by the members of the Newton Camera club was opened yesterday afternoon and evening and will be continued through the afternoon and evening of today and Saturday. The exhibit took place in the pleasant new club house, completed only a few weeks since, on Brookline avenue, where every convenience is being secured for the work of the club.

The photographs placed on exhibition show in most cases great painstaking in the development of the subject. There are many fine repetitions, in the entire exhibit and these are so varied as to make the whole a most pleasant and entertaining variety.

The judges have not yet been decided upon but will probably be selected today. There were about 15 exhibitors subjects in the club house last evening.

The grouping of Walter B. Swift's exhibit was doubtless the most artistic and included some excellent subjects, "The Trout Brook" and "Along the Lane" being especially fine.

An exquisite photo of the "Charlesgate" from the Charles river, was one of the finest pieces of work in the exhibit. It was from the hand of Edwin Stockin.

F. W. Sprague's exhibit was one of the most noteworthy, all the work being done by the exhibitor. A beautifully finished set piece was exquisitely finished. A marine photo with the waves breaking over the rocks was another fine production.

The exhibit of Mr. J. S. Kilburn showed great painstaking and the subjects were all excellently brought out. "The Old Farm" was one of the best in Chas. H. Fewkes exhibit.

One of the most interesting groups was that of Chas. E. Lord. There were some exquisite samples of platinum work both in portrait and scenery productions. Dr. E. B. Hitchcock's "Goodnight" was a most winsome subject and attracted much attention.

Miss Elizabeth A. Sanborn contributed a large and varied collection of subjects which were excellently brought out. "The Sick Dolly" was Jane Stockwell's center piece and the "Old Mill" and a pretty night scene were finely finished.

F. H. Burt contributed a fine photo in his "Canal" at Amsterdam, Holland. "Moat Mountain" from the Intervale House and several shore scenes.

Henry M. Burr's exhibit was of New Hampshire scenes and object studies. E. F. Billings showed some very pretty scenes at Magnolia and among the White Mountains.

J. W. Davis contributed a large exhibit of California subjects.

J. W. Barber exhibited a variety of subjects.

W. H. S. Pearce's collection consisted largely of bromide enlargements of the subjects and their treatment being very pleasing.

T. M. Clark had some well finished photographs in his collection.

Some fine specimens of the album process work were shown, a noteworthy enlargement being the portrait of the president of the club, Dr. E. B. Hitchcock.

It is expected that there will be quite an increase in the number of subjects on exhibition today, the storm of yesterday delaying the hanging of many that were expected.

—Ivers & Pond pianos, Farley, Newton.

—A good whisk broom for 10c.; Thorn's.

—See notice of Robt J. Burdette, Humalist, in Newton Highlands column. Read it.

—Rev. E. E. Hale will read at the Methodist church, Newtonville, Monday evening, Feb. 19.

—There are letters at the postoffice for Miss A. M. Angell, Dr. F. A. Gross, Miss Anne Hamilton, and Miss M. H. Hove. Mrs. Leyman Prescott, Polite Hoffman, Esq.

—Rev. V. A. Cooper, D. D., superintendent of the Little Wanderer's Home, preached last Sunday at the Congregational church.

—Ex-Officer W. O. Harlow, who resigned his place on the police force, has leased a place near his old home in Cotuit and leaves today to day to enter new duties and business there.

—The ladies of Abundant will have a treat on the evening of Feb. 22nd, a lecture by Mrs. Abba Gould Woolson upon "Granada and the Alhambra," for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society.

—Mr. Henry P. Coffin of Boston died very suddenly at the Woodmont Park Hotel, Sunday, where he has been spending the winter with his wife and daughter. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon and the interment was at Mt. Auburn.

—Bishop J. H. Vincent will lecture Saturday, Feb. 17, at 3 p. m., in Lincoln Hall, Newton Highlands, on "Tom and His Teachers." This is one of the most famous lectures given by the Rev. Vincent. People of Newton should embrace this rare opportunity to hear Dr. Vincent.

—A petition has been in circulation this week, and has received the signatures of many. It is a request to the police committee to retain Officer Dolan permanently as night officer in this village to succeed Officer Harlow who has resigned. The petition will be presented in a few days.

—The pharmacy of Mr. Walter P. Thorn has been greatly improved by the changes which he has recently made in its interior. The prescription desk at the further end of the store has been moved back, giving nearly six feet additional room in the length of the store for show cases and medicine shelves. The large window on the Lexington street side adds to the appearance and greatly improves the lighting. The new improvements have been put up at the show windows.

—Rev. T. W. Bishop entertained his young men's class at his home one evening last week and a good time was thoroughly enjoyed. An orchestra made up of pupils from the High school furnished the instrumental music. Miss Renny, Mr. Bishop's niece, of Brookline, sang several pieces. Dr. J. Bergen Ogden, a member of the class and an instructor at the Harvard University Medical School, gave an admirable talk on "Don't Drink," which was fully illustrated. Another member of the class, Mr. Edward Waite, has been given a position at the Cambridge observatory, vacated by William J. was chosen president, James Jordan, vice-president; Fred Sargent, treasurer, and Ernest Ayres, secretary.

—The contrast between the sidewalks and streets in this village and those of our sister villages on the main line of the railroad after a severe snow storm, such as has just been experienced, is very striking. In Newton the sidewalk ordinance is in effect and the snow is cleared away, leaving good concrete walks for pedestrians in the worst of weather. Our citizens here have to slip and plover over uneven snow and wade through the scatterings left by the snow plow. The new ordinance not only clears a clean sidewalk in Newton, but the highway has to cart off the big accumulation from the gutters, making street travel much easier and safer. It was short sighted policy on the part of this ward's representatives to oppose an application of the ordinance in Abundant.

LEGISLATIVE HEARINGS.

THE ESTABROOK BILL FOR A REDUCTION OF RAILROAD RATES.

Samuel Hoar, counsel for the Boston and Albany Railroad Company, in appearing before the committee on railroads at the State House, Tuesday, in opposition to the Estabrook bill providing for a 2-cent per mile rate on all railroads, made an announcement which will be interesting news to suburban passengers.
He said that, on and after Feb. 15, the company will sell 50-ride tickets at the same rate as the 100-ride tickets are now sold. People who live on the line of the Boston and Albany at Newton and stations beyond have long felt it a burden to pay out the large sum required to purchase a 100-ride ticket, which generally lasts over two months, the corporation in the mean time enjoying the benefit of the money, which in the aggregate amounts to a large sum. Mr. Hoar said the directors, in response to a strong demand, had just voted to issue a 50-ride ticket at the 100-ride rate.

In speaking further on the proposition before the committee, Mr. Hoar said that the average rate per mile per passenger on his road is 1.33 cents, and also that the time is not propitious for such legislation. The revenues of the railroad companies are being enormously reduced, and if the kind of legislation proposed in the numerous bills before the House is enacted, there must be an enormous reduction in wages and the number of trains and facilities furnished the public.

The directors of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company have already been considering the matter of a reduction of wages and, while they intend to keep wages where they are, if possible, they cannot do so if there is to be so much legislation hostile to its interests and ruinous to its business. At present, between 55 and 60 per cent. of the travel on the road is within the 10 mile limit, and the rate per mile per passenger there is 1 cent.

TRANSPORTATION OF MERCHANDISE.

There was an interesting hearing on the bill recently introduced to authorize street railways to carry express and merchandise. Street railway companies and steam railroads as well were represented by counsel, the former to favor and the latter to oppose the novel enterprise. Vice-President Cummings of the West End street railway, T. E. Proctor of the Lynn and Boston railroad, W. H.
Coolidge of the Boston & Maine and Samuel Hoar of the Boston & Albany were present.

Mr. Cummings thought there could be no reasonable objection to the proposed measure and assured the committee that there would be no clash with the steam railroad interests. He gave the committee to understand that the bill did not in any way originate with his company, nor did it have any great interest in the passage of the bill. If the bill were given, and his road should take to transport express matter, it might and it might not make money. Numerous petitions had been received by the West End company from large business concerns urging them to assist said petitioners by transporting their goods.
Even expressmen insisted Mr. Cummings had asked his company to get the power to transport their packages to certain places during the night.

Mr. T. E. Proctor favored the passage of the bill. No harm could come from it, he said, but much good.
Mr. Coolidge asked Mr. Cummings
what theory he had concerning the matter in which the express matter would be placed on the cars. Mr. Cummings replied that he had no theory on the question whatsoever. He had not thought on it.

S. L. Powers of the Newton & Boston road wanted to see the bill to amend general grounds of improved facility for the public. "The right to transport passengers," he insisted, "should also warrant the right to transport the express of those passengers."

"It is stated that if this authority is granted steam railroads will be competed with in the carriage of freight and merchandise. I grant that this is true; but they now compete with each other also in the transportation of passengers."

John C. Lane wanted to see the authority granted.

T. C. Brophy opposed the bill. He did not think that passengers were accommodated by the street railways now, and that other accommodations should not be attempted till that was insured. W.
W. Field also remonstrated against the passage of the measure. He did not want to see the streets further crowded with cars. There is a movement now, he said, to get the cars under ground and $5,000,000 has been appropriated for that end. This is a step backward.

Samuel Hoar, appearing for the Boston & Albany, and W. H. Coolidge of the Boston & Maine opposed the bill.

Training Schools for Nurses.

[Boston Herald, Feb. 14th.]

There was a time when, in some circles in our country, it was regarded as quite an important part of a woman's education that she should know something of the proper care of the sick. To be a good nurse was to win respect, and this qualification was often thought to counterbalance deficiency in other respects. But the times changed. The art of nursing, which was almost an inheritance in some families, and sedu-lously cultivated in others, fell into disuse. It was no longer rated so high among feminine accomplishments. In fact, there was a disposition to class the art of nursing with various other old-time employments for women, such as spinning and weaving.

Again the times changed, and the professional nurse appeared. Not indeed as a new official, for she had long been in existence, but she began to be popular, the community recognized her value,
and she found her field.

No one can study the progress made in the past twenty-five years in the training of nurses without being amazed at the splendid results already achieved. A woman graduating from some of the nurses' schools in this country knows as much today about anatomy and physiology, materia medica and surgery and such branches of knowledge as many a physician did fifty years ago under the training he then received.

It is not astonishing that women thus fitted for their work should find plenty of it to do. The demand for trained nurses is today far in advance of the supply, and the pay is certainly liberal.

The nurse's vocation opens a wide field of usefulness for women where all the kindly impulses of their nature find abundant gratification, and where they can honestly believe that they are not working in vain.

These thoughts were suggested by the notice of the dedication of the training school for nurses at Newton Wednesday afternoon. The Newton Hospital has been a pioneer in the work of small hospitals, and now is about engaging in the training of nurses to a larger extent than ever before. The hospital has had a small school for several years past, and the graduates have taken high rank in their calling, but now the school is to take a long step forward owing to the facilities provided by the erection of the new building.

Mr. Lucius G. Pratt of West Newton and the late Mr. Edmund W. Converse of Newton provided a fund of about $20,000 for the construction of a building to accommodate forty nurses and pupil nurses. The exercises of dedication will be interesting in themselves, but the occasion is worthy of more than local interest, because it is part of this advancing movement for the better care and treatment of the sick and injured by the employment of women thoroughly trained for the purpose, and also because it widens the door for the many who may find in the nurse's calling their sphere of greatest usefulness in life.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.
 GRAND OPERA HOUSE - Next Monday evening at the Grand Opera House, "False Colors" the title of a new American play, by Mr. Mark Price will be presented by the stock company of that theatre. "False Colors" has been laid in America its characters taken from Americans, its episodes built upon American happenings. The plot never departs from the possible or probable at any time. The characters are encountered every day. The first act of the drama is laid in Nevada and following this the scenes are enacted on the Hudson river. "False Colors" will be found interesting, even exciting from first to last. The complications will be natural, are numerous and at times the dialogue approaches that of tragedy. The stock company are alive to the importance of the production and are giving the author the benefit of their energy and zeal. On Washington's birthday, Thursday, and on Saturday matinees will be given. Seats should be ordered early as large houses are assured.

PARK THEATRE - Next Monday, the 19th inst., will witness the beginning of the third and last week of the engagement of Russell's Comedians at the Park Theatre. "About Town" will continue to be the attraction, the remarkable success of this farce-comedy, having earned for it deserved success. Too much cannot be said in commendation of this, John H. Russell's latest amusement venture. Big audiences which invariably fill Manager Stetson's cosy theatre seem never to weary of the sparkling catching mirth, bright dialogue, clever specialties, telling local bits and uproarious fun generally with which "About Town" is replete. "About Town" is one of the happiest combinations of fun, beauty and music ever seen on the Boston stage. The usual matinees will be given Wednesday and Saturday.

COLUMBIA THEATRE - "Last three weeks of 'Cherry's Aunt'" is the announcement of this theatre. Notwithstanding the phenomenal success of the play, they cannot continue it longer than the brief period stated, as previous engagements preclude the possibility of doing so. No play ever presented in this city has made a more brilliant record than "Cherry's Aunt," and those who have already witnessed it several times will wish to see it at least once more before it is taken off. It is pleasant to hear the merry laughter of the little folk who are present at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees, and who fully enjoy the funny episodes.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE - The Hollis Street Theatre will present on February 19, Mr. E. S. Sothern, surrounded by a strong supporting company, in his latest success, "Sheridan, or the Maid of Bath." Mr. Sothern is too well known to need introduction and his annual engagements here are always appreciated by the public. His new play is by Paul M. Potter and has proved eminently successful wherever seen, and is a novelty in the way of showing Mr. Sothern in a different line of characters from those with which the public are familiar. The role that Mr. Sothern will assume is that of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the peerless English wit, orator and author. The scenes of the play are laid at Bath, which was the social centre of England 200 years ago, and it has been Mr. Sothern's aim that the scenic portion of the play and the costumes should be historically accurate in every detail. The time is laid in the period of England's gayest and most gallant humor, and the entire production cannot fail to be a most agreeable one in every particular. Mr. Sothern's supporting company will be the strongest one that has yet surrounded him, and in fact nothing has been left undone to make the coming engagement a success in every particular.

RECEPTION AT LASSELL.
 LOUISE MANNING HODGKINS HOSPITALLY ENTERTAINED.
 The lights in Lassell Seminary blazed out hospitably Monday night and cheered the 300 strangers, who had ventured to Andover to attend Principal Bragdon's reception in honor of Miss Louise Manning Hodgkins, the newly elected editor of the Heathen Women's Friend. The ladies of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, who were particularly invited for the occasion, were present in great numbers to welcome the guests. These included Bishop R. S. Foster, Chaplain C. M. McCabe, Mrs. Joseph Cook, and the president of the society, Mrs. Dr. Charles Parkhurst, who received the visitors; Hon. E. H. Dunn, Dean Huntington of Boston University and Hon. John Haigh of Somerville. There was speaking and a collation, but before that the guests were permitted to wander at will through the seminary. The swimming pool, the gymnasium, the reading rooms, art exhibit, and cooking school-room were points of interest for the men. The seminary students were mostly in their dormitory rooms upstairs, only a few favored ones enjoying the gala occasion below. President Bragdon introduced the speakers from the platform in the gymnasium, which was crowded to its utmost.

Chaplain McCabe said: "We bid this woman Godspeed in her great work. In 35 years the record of heathen converts has increased from 1 to 120,000. Right will overtake wrong by and by. In India the mission contributes $125,000 for its self-support." The chaplain told of the magnificent contribution of $38,000, one-tenth of the incomes of the members of the Seventh Day Adventists' church in Battle Creek. He suggested that people joining the Methodist church should do the same thing. He said that if this plan was carried out in all the Protestant churches $100,000,000 would be raised, and if they had that amount they could plant the rose of Sharon all over the earth.

Bishop Foster said: "We are here particularly to greet the new editor of the paper. We have nothing else to do on earth but to bring about the millennium, the saving of all souls." The tribute to the Heathen Women's Magazine and to Editress Hodgkins, the women of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society are consecrated, he said. They are noble and deserving.

Miss Hodgkins was introduced and spoke in a happy vein, thanking her friends most cordially. "We have learned," she said, "to know the value and strength of corporate system. Women do more valuable work now than they did years ago."

SHE UNDERSTOOD IT.
 BUT HER QUESTIONS WERE TOO MANY FOR HIM.
 (From the Indianapolis Sentinel.)

"My dear," she asked, "what do they mean by the eight-hour movement?" "It is a movement among the laborers and mechanics to do a day's work in eight hours."

"It was started by the employers, wasn't it?" "No, it wasn't started by the employers. What do you suppose they would want to advocate anything like that for? It was started among the mechanics. They want shorter hours."

"They can't make the hours any shorter just to please them, can they?" "Now would you listen to that! No, of course not. They can't make the hours shorter, but they can make them fewer, can't they?"

"Well, I don't see how they can do that. There were always 24 hours in a day, and they can't skip any of them without spoiling the day," and she bit her finger nail with a perplexed air.

"That's it, you understand it now; they're going to slip up behind the day when it has its back turned and steal a few hours thinking it won't miss them. I wish I had your keen power of perception."

"Now, don't get mad. I think I see through it now. The laborers want more hours of night and less hours of daylight; isn't that it?"

"No," he yelled, "that isn't it. What they want is to do a day's work in eight hours instead of 12 days. Do you think you can get that through your head?"

"Well, they have their day's work to do, don't they? And when they get it done they are through? And the more they have to do in a certain time, makes it that much harder on them, doesn't it?"

"Well?"

"Then if they are allowed 12 hours to do a day's work in now by their employers, what do they want to have a law which makes them do the work in eight hours for? It would make them work just that much harder, wouldn't it?"

But he had fled.

he tells a most fascinating story. He will succeed his father as King, and he is making strenuous efforts to Christianize his people.

—Bishop J. H. Vincent will lecture Saturday, Feb. 17, at 3 p. m. in Lincoln Hall, Newton Highlands, on "Tom and His Teachers." This is one of the most famous lectures of this most famous speaker. People of Newton should embrace this rare opportunity to hear Dr. Vincent.

Stacy presented for the second number, Charles Thomas' farce, "Breaking the Ice." Music was furnished by a volunteer orchestra. It was one of the most successful entertainments of the series.

—There has seldom if ever prevailed in this community such a general feeling of indignation as the recent experience with the board of health and superintendent of schools has caused. It has been for several weeks and still is a subject of general discussion in the homes and at social gatherings. The difference of opinion between the chairman of the health board, a former practitioner here, and the local physicians, before making an investigation, is thought to be significant. The feeling has been so deep that the local representatives brought it before the common council Monday evening, a full report of which is given on the second page, and the final disposition of the matter will be awaited with interest.

—The handsome summer residence of Mr. Louis R. Spear, corner of Summer and Ward streets, was burned to the ground early Tuesday morning. The house was fully furnished but unoccupied, as Mr. Spear and his family during the winter are residing at 64 Main street, Cambridge. The fire made a grand illumination for miles around, and quite a large number went to the fire believing it to be much nearer than it proved. The alarm was rung in from box 73 by Wiley Edmunds, and before the alarm was through ringing, the hose and engine had nearly reached the burning dwelling. It was impossible to save the house, which was a mass of flames when the department arrived and their hose turned upon the adjoining houses to prevent their catching fire. The terrible wind and storm blew the flames hundreds of feet in the air and carried burning boards from the dwelling, way over into Centre street. The hose wagon from Newtonville drove through the storm and snow in twenty minutes, and arrived minutes later. Chief Birby was on hand clear from West Newton, having to face the gale all the way. The rest of the department was on hand in excellent time. The house and contents were a total loss. The insurance was about $15,000. John Boyce first discovered the fire and notified Mr. H. W. Mason's coachman, Desmond, but the alarm was given at the engine house by an officer. Boyce's presence in the vicinity at that time of alarm was thought to be suspicious and Officer Condrin placed him under arrest for alleged incendiaryism. He was held in $8000 and was arraigned Wednesday morning, the hearing lasting over into Thursday. The result being Boyce's discharge. It seems probable that the fire caught, in the severe storm, from the electric wires used to light the house.

—A unique feature of the entertainment at the free sociable at the Congregational church, last night, was the display of bouquets displayed everywhere on the laps of the gentlemen's coats, imparting an air of festivity and gaiety not often seen at these gatherings. For not only will the entertainments be worth much more than the price asked, but the money made will remain here in the place in substantial and attractive form, as it is to help build the new M. Nonantum Mills Close.

The indefinite closing of the Nonantum Worst Mills last night without a word of warning to any of the employees was a very great surprise and may lead to some hardship on the part of the 700 employees, left without the means of earning their livelihood in the middle of the winter.

No cause is vouchsafed by the authorities for the summary shut down of the mills. The mill will probably start up when the attitude of the Senate on the Wilson bill is definitely ascertained.

For the relief and cure of a cold in the head there is no more potent remedy than Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after every other treatment have proved of no avail.

NEWTON PETITIONS.

GAS AND ELECTRICITY AT THE STATE HOUSE.

At the hearing before the committee on manufactures, at the State House, Wednesday morning, there was a hearing on the petition of E. M. Fowle, W. F. Harback, E. J. Hyde and Jackson, for a change in the law regarding the laying of gas pipes in the street of a town or city which has no local company. Their are some 14 gas companies which would be affected by the change, which places the matter in the hands of the mayor and aldermen.

Gas Commissioner Barker suggested that it was proposed to override the powers of the Gas Commission for no good reason, and that it might be just as well to let the law and authority remain as is. Lawyer Goodrich and E. W. Burdett agreed with Mr. Barker and the hearing was closed.

The committee also considered the petition of the city of Newton, that it may be authorized to manufacture gas and electricity. Newton was represented by Councilman Greene, who explained the petition at some length. Alderman Plummer was also present. The bill provides that a vote of the city council is all that is needed for the city to commence operations. Mr. J. B. Goodrich appeared for the Newton and Watertown gas company, and had just begun to cross question Mr. Greene, when the time of the committee expired and the hearing was adjourned to next Wednesday.

Newton Parks and Roads.

City Solicitor Slocum of Newton, in obedience to an order of the mayor and aldermen, was before the legislative Committee on Cities Wednesday morning for a law creating a Street, Park and Drainage Commission for that city. What is wanted is a commission like that of the Boston Board of survey, with similar powers and duties. It is to make surveys for the laying out of highways, parks, etc., and to have the general charge of water courses and valleys, to lay out their channels and provide for their width and drainage.

A provision of the bill provides for the payment of damages which may be caused by the acts and work of the commission. The committee is to consist of three able and discreet men to be appointed by the mayor and aldermen.

Thomas C. Proctor, Esq., spoke in opposition on behalf of remonstrating real estate owners who are not impressed by what they have heard of the work of the Boston Board of Survey, and who desire to have the control of their property remain in their own hands.

Land Offered for a Park.

To the Editor of the Graphic:
I wish to call the attention of the citizens of Newton to the offer of land for a public park made by Messrs. Joseph N. Bacon, Geo. D. Dix, Wm. C. Strong, Nicholas P. Gilman, Geo. H. Frost and others.

This offer is made upon the condition that the section of the Central Boulevard between Valentine street and Washington follows the Fuller street route, the one recommended by the Boulevard Commission, or the southern route. The proposed park lies in the interval between Fuller street and Waban, and embraces some of the finest natural scenery in Newton. It is beautifully diversified, well wooded, and would protect the sources of Chestnut brook and its branches from pollution.

It is in every way a desirable addition to the boulevard, whichever of the two routes may be selected, and it is an offer which the city should unhesitatingly accept. E. B. Towne.

DEATH OF A. H. LINDER.

CAUSED BY THE RUPTURE OF A BLOOD VESSEL IN THE BRAIN.

A. Hosmer Linder died on Sunday afternoon without having regained consciousness.

Death was simply a wasting away of his strength.

He was a member of the junior class at Harvard College and was the youngest son of George Linder of Newton, of the firm of Linder & Meyer, commission merchants of Boston. He was 19 years and 4 months old. He prepared for college at the Newton high school and at Mr. Cutler's private school. On entering college he devoted himself to hard study, but found time for engaging in several forms of athletics. He rowed in his class crew and also was a student of boxing. He was secretary of the Harvard Sparring Club and a member of the Pi Eta Society.

Mr. Linder's sad end is deeply deplored by every member of the university. From the beginning of his illness his room has been besieged by students, many of whom were not even acquainted with him, but yet were none the less desirous to hear some news of him. He enjoyed a splendid reputation, and was universally respected for his quiet, yet manly ways.

An autopsy was made Monday morning by Medical Examiner Swan of Cambridge, assisted by Medical Examiner Durell of Somerville and Drs. John Homans, W. T. Councilman, Hildreth, Walton and F. W. Webster of Newton.

Their finding was that death was caused by a hemorrhage from a ruptured blood vessel at the base of the brain.

Dr. George Walton, one of the physicians in charge of the case said in an interview, "Death was caused by a hemorrhage in the medulla oblongata at the base of the brain; this was proved by the autopsy and it would have been impossible to perform an operation at that point."

"Then it was sure death from the start."

"Yes—as far as we know."

Medical Examiner T. M. Durell, said: "So far as I know, this is the only case, certainly the only one that has come within my personal knowledge, where a blow on the jaw has caused a rupture of the lateral sinus without fracture of the skull."

"The exact manner in which the force of the blow was expended on this particular point is not easy to determine."

JUNIORS EXPRESS THEIR FEELINGS.

At a meeting of the junior class of Harvard, held Monday night, it was voted that the class attend the funeral of Linder in its body. It was also voted that the class should send flowers. A committee was appointed, and drew up the following letter:

CAMBRIDGE, Feb. 19, 1894.

Dear Mr. Linder:—We write to you in the name of the class of '95, to express as deeply as possible the great and personal sorrow which we feel has come to all of us in the death of your son. Beside the bereavement which every one who knew him has suffered in the loss of a sincere friend, each member of the class has felt that the loss has come to him at something personal. Your son was a man whom we were proud to call a classmate, and who stood to us as the representative of all that was quiet and manly.

But while our loss has been that of a classmate who was a dear friend to so many of us, and who was respected by all, we appreciate that your loss is far greater, and we wish to tell you of the deep sympathy that every one of us feels for you.

CUT OFF UNTIMELY.

The Boston Herald said editorially of the sad affair:

The death of Alfred Hosmer Linder at Harvard, Sunday, is under the circumstances, a peculiarly sad one. He was a young man of simple, gentlemanly bearing, popular in the large circle of his classmates and acquaintances, of more than average ability as a student, and with everything to live for. His untimely death is one of those mysterious dispensations of Providence which sorrow-stricken friends find it very hard to accept. The sympathy not only of all who knew him, but of the commiserating public, will go out at this time to his family in their affliction, and also to that other one who suffers as innocently and perhaps even more keenly.

FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon, at the residence of Professor Farlow, uncle of the deceased, 24 Quincy street, Cambridge, and the house was crowded with sorrowing students, friends and relatives, many of whom were from Newton. President Eliot and a majority of the Harvard faculty, and the junior class of which the deceased was a member, were present. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Rev. Mr. Hornbroke of Newton opened the services with scriptural readings and tender words of consolation for the parents and friends. Rev. Dr. Peabody of Harvard followed with readings and a prayer, and a male quartet sang appropriate selections.

The pall-bearers were Graham Hosmer, Walter Soule, J. A. Lord, A. W. Whittier, Jr., Torrence Parker, F. M. Elms, John Harwood and W. B. Ellis. The burial was at the Newton cemetery.

The West Newton Boulevard.

Boston, Feb. 21, 1894.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:—

Dear Sir—I read a communication in a recent issue of your paper in favor of the northern location for the boulevard, and it having come to the knowledge of the writer that some of the statements contained therein had been given considerable weight by the citizens of Newton I feel that a statement of the facts should be made.

What are the facts? Is the northern or the southern route preferable, and why? Which route has the greater natural beauty and would be the more picturesque? This is a question which would be left largely to individual judgment but should be passed upon by the best landscape talent which the city of Newton can procure, as this point is one of the utmost importance.

Which will open up the greater amount of taxable property and tend to attract residents to Newton? The boulevard of itself would attract residents, especially if it is located in a manner that the surroundings would be attractive, and it will develop land for quite a distance around it, and I believe that parties competent to judge will agree that the best residential property will not be directly and wholly on the boulevard but some distance from it. The southern route opens up taxable property for residential property, at least five to one more than would the northern route, inasmuch as the property through which the boulevard would go if the southern location should be decided upon is within 1500 feet of the northern location, and the latter would be equally as well developed for residential purposes.

Which will have the best and easiest grades and be the most economical to keep in repair? Parties acquainted with road work are aware that the heavier the grade the more expensive it is to keep in repair. The northern route has grades as high as five per cent., while the southern route has grades not exceeding two and three-quarters per cent.

Which will be the least expensive to build? Engineers as well as doctors disagree, but competent engineering skill states that the southern route can be built at the same or less cost than the northern one. While this is the last question which should be considered by the citizens of Newton on so important a matter as the boulevard, still, all other things being equal, it may have some weight. The advocates of the northern route, I understand, have agreed to pay all damages caused by building the boulevard, provided they are allowed all betterments.

The advocates of the southern route have also made the same offer. The advocates of the northern route, have furthermore agreed to pay one-third the expense for the entire route. The advocates of the southern route have agreed to pay one-third the expense for a portion of the route, and in addition have agreed to present to the city, free of charge, adjoining land some 30 acres in extent for park purposes.

It has also been endeavored by some parties to show that the location of the boulevard by the southern route would be through a bog, while the facts are that the southern route is all hard pan after the loam is removed, with the exception of about 75 feet of bog which, when excavated, can be filled from a cut which has to be made on an adjoining piece of the road, whereas the northern route has at least 500 feet of bog, the filling for which has got to be taken from quite a distance.

The Fuller street route is not referred to in the above communication for the reason that the writer understands that some of the changes made by the Fuller street residents the highway committee have decided not to consider it.

Real Estate Sales.

Edward F. Barnes last week negotiated several important sales of real estate in this city. He has sold for the account of Edwin B. Rogers a dwelling house, with stable and two parcels of land, aggregating 101,200 square feet, situated on the south side of Washington street, Himmewell hill. The buyer was John Q. A. Whittemore of Boston.

Mr. Barnes has also sold for Emma F. and Jessie H. Barker the estate lately occupied by them, comprising a dwelling house recently partially destroyed by fire, with stable and lot containing 56,210 square feet, situated on the corner of Summit and Bellevue streets, Mt. Ida. It was bought by Charles Whittemore of Natick, who will probably remove to the present dwelling and erect a new house for his occupancy on the old site.

Another sale by the same broker was one for the joint account of Lewis E. Coffin and Edward F. Barnes. The "Bodgett estate," No. 147 Newtonville avenue, Mt. Ida, comprising a dwelling house with stable and lot containing 18,500 square feet, was sold to John W. Scott of Newton, who will immediately occupy the premises.

Season of Comic Opera.

The two performances of "The Doctor of Alcantara" at City Hall, West Newton, March 6 and 7, promises to be quite meritorious. The cast will include Ned Stutson of Cadet theatricals celebrity, as the Doctor, Mr. George D. Davis as Don Pomposo, Mr. Ben Knapp of Boston as Carlos, Mr. Edward C. Burrage as one of the porters, Miss Louise G. Dietrick, the clever member of the Players, as Inez, and others equally well known.

Miss Philip W. Carter of Newtonville, who is managing the affair, has had considerable experience in this line and is working hard to see that all the necessary details of a successful stage performance are carefully attended to. The chorus is well selected and efficient, embracing well known singers in the several villages. The stage settings and the costumes will be found correct. This opera has not been given in this section for some time past, though it is well known as the meritorious work of the late Julius Eichberg and Benjamin S. Woolf.

ONE STEP FORWARD.

Those who realize what a constant source of danger, and what a serious interference with business the grade crossings are, will be glad to know that the board of aldermen has taken some definite action, and at their last meeting petitioned the Superior Court for a commission on the abolition of grade crossings in Newton. The matter would have to be sent to a commission in any event, and it is wiser to send it there at once, than to waste any more time in useless discussions and hearings.

The commission will of course be experts in this matter, and the case can be argued before them by those who are competent to give opinions. There are a great many who are opposed to the elevation of the tracks, as they think it would be of serious injury to the best interests of the city, and they will be given a full hearing.

So many plans and schemes have been presented that it is no wonder if the aldermen feel a little bewildered, and the longer the work is delayed the more numerous would be the schemes.

It is of great importance to the city to have the grade crossings abolished as speedily as possible, and the north side is particularly interested. Owners of property say the greatest difficulty they find in renting their houses is that parents object to sending their children across the tracks to school, and that families with small children are very unwilling to take a house on the north side, especially in Wards One and Seven. This objection is a reasonable one, and if the grade crossings are removed a boom in the north side property may be looked for. The present condition of Washington street is not a credit to the city, and the street between Newton and West Newton is almost impassable for sleighs, on account of the narrowness of the street and the railway tracks in the center, which leave only a narrow passage for teams, on which the snow is piled up in a manner to make it almost impossible to drive through the street with safety. Yet nothing can be done in the way of widening the street until the grade crossing question is settled. After the meeting on Monday night, the board met informally and voted unanimously in favor of depressing the tracks.

THAT COMMISSION.

The bill for a street park and drainage commission, which aroused so much opposition as soon as its rather stringent provisions were known, is to be amended and the objectionable features removed.

There is no question but that it would have been much better for Newton to have had some such commission in charge of its streets, so as to have had some sort of a system in the laying out of streets, and less of narrow side streets that go nowhere in particular, but which were laid out at the will of the owner of the land, without regard to the convenience of the public. The result of the lack of system is not a happy one, and has not added to the attractiveness of the city.

The report of the recent boulevard commission shows what could be done with a properly constituted body that had power to enforce its ideas of what would be best for the city, and such a commission would be of great benefit in the long run, and this was evidently the idea of those who framed the bill. They took a public-spirited view of the whole subject, and made regulations to that end, but these of course conflicted more or less with private interests, and aroused great opposition from land owners.

One of the privileges of a free country is the right of every land owner to develop his land in any method that seems good to him, and this is a right that people do not wish to relinquish, as was shown by the opposition to the bill.

The aldermen have made various amendments, to meet the objections urged, and as amended the bill provides for a very harmless sort of commission, which has no powers to speak of, and it will be chiefly an advisory board, the power to enforce its recommendations being left to the City Council.

ONE of the reporters for the Boston Herald made a funny break in his report of the doings of the board of aldermen, by stating that "Moses Clark was appointed city treasurer, and John A. Kendrick deputy collector." People who have not noticed the unreliability of Newton reports in Boston papers, of late, really believed that a cyclone had struck City Hall, but those who were posted interpreted the statement as meaning that City Treasurer and Collector Kendrick had made his usual annual appointment of Assistant City Treasurer Moses Clark as deputy collector of taxes. The City Press Association may be a cheap method of collecting news, but the results are not as satisfactory as the old methods when Newton matters were reported by one of the most capable and reliable reporters on the Herald staff. A new reporter took charge this week, and possibly there may be some improvement. He says that his report was sent in all right, but that the "mixing up" was done in the Herald office.

THE bill to have boards of police for all the cities of the state is meeting with very lively opposition from prominent citizens of all parties. Boston now has a police commission, and judging from that, none of the cities would be benefited by having a similar body. Here in Newton the citizens do not want any political and irresponsible board to have charge of police matters. The mayor is at the head of the department, and all abuses can be speedily corrected, and if any mistake is made, it can be remedied at once. All details of local government should be as near to the people as possible, and the people do not want the governor nor the legislature interfering with local affairs.

MR. E. B. HASKELL is sending some very interesting letters to the Sunday Herald, describing sights and scenes in the far East. His last letter was made up of "observations in the heart of Ceylon." An interesting interview with a Buddhist priest was described, in which the "Chaplain" referred to, as so eager to ask leading questions, is Rev. Mr. Tiffany. Mr. Haskell's companion on his travels.

MR. W. C. STRONG has an interesting letter in another column, giving his views as to the advantage of the so-called southern route of the Central Boulevard through West Newton. There is a good deal to be said in favor of this route, but we still are of the opinion that the city would derive a greater benefit if the northern route was selected.

THE annual crusade against docked horses appears this year in the form of a bill which requires owners of such animals to keep them covered with a cloth or close netting, during June, July, August and September, and to register them with the clerks of towns and cities. There seems some probability of the bill being passed.

THE North Side Improvement Association, after listening to an address by ex-City Engineer Noyes, appointed a committee headed by Mr. James T. Allen, to appear at the State House in favor of the original bill for a street and park commission, but no hearing was held this week.

The Grand Opera Season.

The season of Grand Opera in French and Italian, at the handsomely refitted Mechanic's building (auditorium) is nearly at hand. The sale of season tickets has closed. Last Monday the sale of seats for single performances began. Many good seats can still be secured if prompt application is made. It is pretty well known all over New England now, that a list of artists such as no city in the world (except New York, this season), has ever seen, such an assemblage of great, grand, magnificent singers, will appear here under Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau's management for the two weeks of Grand Opera. There is no need to repeat the names. At any previous date if the entire list of the world's opera singers of note had been made up, no five cities united could have furnished a company one-half as good as that which Abbey, Schoeffel and Grau will furnish this season. The operas for the first week are to be as follows: Faust, Carmen, Nozze di Figaro—Romeo et Juliette, Cavalleria Rusticana and Il Pagliacci (the same evening), Lucia de Lammermoor, Carmen or Faust will be the first matinee. The repertoire for the second week will be chosen from Tannhauser, Lohengrin, Die Meistersinger, Philemon et Baucis, Aida, Rigoletto, L'Amico Fritz, Don Giovanni, Mignon, Semiramide, etc., in fact the entire operatic library, for nothing is beyond the power of this assemblage of artists. The success of the season is assured, and early applications mean the nearest to perfect comfort.

That the operas will be presented in an adequate manner as far as scenery and appointments are concerned, is certain from the fact that four artists have been at work upon the part of the productions for several weeks already. Mr. Wm. Seymond directing and Mr. Wm. Gill heading the list of artists. Manager Schoeffel writes that it is the intention of the firm to make the Boston season an example of what can be done under more than usual excitement. There will be car loads of properties and costumes brought from New York, and in order that the ensembles may be as close to perfect as possible, the entire chorus and even a majority of the supernumeraries will come from the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. As many of the operas will be given after the manner of the Grand Opera, Paris, the ballets will be very interesting, and much new music to the average opera patron will be performed. Never has an enterprise of Abbey, Schoeffel and Grau had brighter prospects.

Camera Club Prizes.

The Newton Camera Club's exhibition closed Saturday evening, and proved very successful, comparing favorably with that of last year.

The prizes were awarded as follows: Best Bromide, 3 dozen bromide paper, 1 gross plates, W. H. S. Pearce. Best 6 portraits, Stanley special prize, C. E. Lord. 1st prize—Best 3, all work of exhibitor, 4 dozen plates, Francis Sprague, Jr. Second, 3 dozen plates, W. H. S. Pearce. 1st Best part work of exhibitor, 4 dozen plates, W. B. Swift. The Album Paper Co. presented the club with a fine enlargement photo of the president of the club, Dr. E. B. Hitchcock.

HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETICS.

MOST SUCCESSFUL MEET IN ITS HISTORY.

The fifth annual meet of the Newton High School A. A. was held in the gymnasium at Newtonville last evening. A large crowd from Boston, Brookline and Cambridge was present, and excitement ran high. The "gym" was tastefully decorated with the colors of each class, and the feeling was at fever heat when a favorite won. The different events were run off in quick order, which reflects great credit on the officials. Elegant silver mugs were given as prizes for first and second places.

The 600-yard run, open, was one of the hottest kind of finishes, and the winner did not have any inches to spare. L. W. Redpath seemed to have more admirers than anybody else, and he did himself proud by keeping up with the cracks in the sprint.

The 30-yard dash brought out a surprise. E. H. Clark was picked as a winner, but he was beaten by J. K. Whittemore.

The team race between Newton and Brookline was very close and was not decided until the last lap. Newton claims that the reason of its loss was because one of its team ran into a spectator.

In the walk, C. V. Moore broke the best interscholastic time by six seconds. The 300 yards race was a gift to E. H. Barnum, who ran a heady race. Considering the track, the time made in the hurdle race was very creditable. The summaries:

30 yard dash (open)—Won by J. K. Whittemore, H. A. A.; E. H. Clark, H. A. A.; second; L. W. Redpath, Newton H. S. A. A., third. Time—3:55.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—The monthly social of the Epworth League was held on Wednesday evening last, at the residence of Mr. C. F. Ford, on Grove street. Papers were read by different members of the league descriptive of the life and work of Gen. Washington, and the vocal and instrumental selections rendered were also appropriate to the season. A few select recitations by Mrs. E. A. Matthews added to the variety of the entertainment, and a pleasant occasion was enjoyed by all.

The material and social features occupied the time from 6 until 8 after which an enjoyable program was furnished by Miss Price, vocalist; Miss Robinson, wharfe; Miss Hardwick, pianist; Mr. Wharfe, violinist.

—The following music will be given at the Universalist church, Sunday morning: "Hark Hark as ye sing," P. A. Schenker, Soprano, alto, tenor and bass solos and quartet, "From Eli!" J. S. Quartet, "God so loved the world," Kingston Solo, "Love not the world," Kingston

—On Feb. 16, Mr. Chas. Strout of C. Strout & Sons, Grocers, died after being in business here 18 years. The merchants in the village showed their appreciation of him by sending a most beautiful floral cross, also the four house of Sands, Page & Taylor of Boston sent a beautiful basket of flowers. The funeral services were held at the house Sunday, and were largely attended. Burial in Newton cemetery.

—Mr. Chas. E. Lord of Newton was among the party of Appalachians, who visited Eagle Mt. House, the past week, and from there made snowshoe excursions among the White Hills. Mr. Lord's camera did good service and his "snap-shots" added much to the pleasure of the party. There is nothing like having a good time perpetuated in memory, at least, and later on the party can see who was there when the snowshoe party made their first climb.

—The "Subscription Party" given by the Newtonville Women's Guild on Tuesday afternoon, in the spacious and pleasant parlors of the Universalist church, was a very successful affair. Prof. Oliver Emerson Bennett furnished delightful entertainment by his readings with Delsarte illustrations, by twelve young ladies from his son, (The Barneys) and the audience was cordially appreciative. Tea was served from half past four to six, and "chat and think" contributed still further to success, as the hope of gaining enough of the latter to help on the charitable work of the club without the drudgery of a "fair" was the principal object of this social and congenial occasion. Mrs. George E. Lord, who presided, received the subscriptions of any friends or members unable to be present.

Make Another Reduction.

The employees of the Nonantum Worsted Co. were given another surprise Saturday, when they went to the mill office to receive their pay for the work done up to Thursday night when the mill shut down. They were offered the chance of returning to work Monday morning, providing they would accept another cut in wages of 10 per cent.

This would make the third 10 per cent reduction within the last three months or a total reduction during that period of 30 per cent.

Where shall I have my hair dressed? Of course you want perfection and the calm assurance that nowhere else in Boston could you meet with better satisfaction. Well then, you must go to the pretty parlors of Mons. V. Miglietti, at 44 Boylston street, who was for nine years the favorite hair-dresser to "Her Majesty's Opera company," and while holding that position he attended such singers as Adelina Patti, Nilsson, Grotter and Albani. For many years he has been established in Boston and numbers among his patrons many of the society leaders of the city. Mons. Miglietti does some very fine work designing the latest coiffures, which may frequently be seen illustrated in the Parisian magazines. He has the choicest of hair goods, and all the luxuries known to the toilet table. Hair cutting, shampooing, trimming and curling bangs, and singeing he does in the quickest and nicest possible manner.

Anders and Hettie Mallon, Paul Waters and Grace Barbour, Dwight Woodberry and Ruth Lisle, Alfred Fuller and Harry Mallon.

After supper a smoke talk was enjoyed.

—The recent entertainment given by the Ladies Sewing Society of the Baptist church was one of the finest ever held. After a general collation and complete report from the Treasurer, Mrs. H. Putnam, a large audience listened with delight to choice selections rendered by a string orchestra, composed of members of the church, under the direction of Mr. E. E. Burdon, whose able qualifications are well known. Miss Edna Goslin gave one of her usual good and pleasing recitations. Miss Alice Bruce entertained the audience by an excellent reading. Miss Warner of Boston responded to a well-earned encore for her good rendition of a vocal solo accompanied by a violin obligato by Mr. Percy Waters. Miss Lovell of Boston sustained her good reputation as a pianist and Miss Marion Burdon showed her usual excellent qualifications as accompanist. The entire entertainment reflected great credit upon the untiring energies of the committee.

—A suspicious looking man was arrested on the street here at three o'clock Tuesday morning, by Officer Richard Kyte. At the police station he admitted breaking into a house on Crescent street. An officer was sent to the house of Mrs. Alice Madison on Crescent street. She knew nothing about the robbery until informed of it and she identified two pocket-books containing $22 in money and a silk handkerchief which were found on the prisoner. He turns out to be a notorious character known as Charles Ayers, alias Charles Williams, who was arrested some years ago for breaking and entering. While in the jail he assaulted keeper William H. Sleeper. When the case came to trial he was sentenced to five years for breaking and entering and received an additional sentence of two and one-half years for the assault. He was released last Friday on the expiration of his sentence, and his present arrest will bring him under the habitual criminal act.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Newton Congregational Club was held in the chapel of the Second church, Monday evening. After an enjoyable social hour, a bountiful collation was served. The business meeting followed the social and material features. Rev. Daniel Green was elected to fill the vacancy on the reception committee. Other nominations were: Rev. G. M. Adams, chairman of the committee on the new manual, offered several amendments to the constitution and by-laws which will be voted upon at the next meeting. The music furnished by the quartet from the Newton Highlands church was greatly enjoyed. Rev. Smith Baker, D. D. pastor of the Maverick church, East Boston, gave an address on the subject, "The Christian Mission." He commenced by outlining the progress of Congregationalism in this country. The Congregationalists he said were once the most important Christian body in the United States. The believers represented much of the culture and education of the highest type. The Congregational churches once led, but it is not so today. Other denominations have arisen and have extended their influence by entering into the various fields where once the order body of believers held sway. It is for us now to work toward the union of all Evangelical Christians. A union church must of necessity be of the Congregational type. There is the fundamental fabric in Congregationalism which is the basis of all the forms of Evangelical belief, Congregationalism should stand for one thing. To complete the union, we should insist upon that in our belief which we deem necessary for salvation. We should adapt ourselves to any form of worship which the desires of the people. Much has been lost by an adherence to hereditary forms of worship. The last 10 years have witnessed those broader views among Christians, which will ultimately result in the acceptance of the best in all beliefs. In conclusion he said, "Let us rise to the dignity of our mission, for in our creed is a home for everyone, from the top to bottom of society, desirous of leading a Christian life."

Associated Charities.

A gentleman once asked a director of the Associated Charities, "Why should the community give you a thousand dollars, when by your own report, you gave last year but seventy dollars to the poor?"

This was a very pertinent inquiry, and would be almost unanswerable if we claimed to exist for the purpose of giving alms, but we lose no opportunity of assuring the public that to give direct relief is not the object of our being.

It would be only almost unanswerable even then, because, in point of fact, the actual relief that is given, in direct consequence of our efforts amounts to many times seventy dollars. Under perfect organization this should all be recorded, and even in our imperfect state, much of it is set down in black and white, in records of meetings, and on registration cards. In the future, when the community has fully recognized our beneficent functions, we hope to have it all appear in correct statistical form, in our annual reports, but that means the time of a second person paid for.

We do not, however, ask a thousand dollars from the community to enable us to give money, or clothing, or food, or fuel, to the poor. We do this, and use our influence to have it done, just as little as the prevention of absolute suffering will allow.

Dr. Shinn has recently said, in these columns, that the Associated Charities exist for the purpose of suppressing fraudulent begging. That is certainly one object, and an important one, for which we exist, and we most heartily second Dr. Shinn in his efforts to have all beggars at the door sent to this office for investigation. They do not always come. Some of them frankly say, "We do not want to go there, they will look us up." When they do come, it scores one point in their favor always. Some charitable persons have objected to sending these people here, on the ground that the office is always open, which is true, and unavoidable. Practically, it can be said that it is open every forenoon, except on Sunday. It is surely open from nine to ten. It is sometimes open in the afternoon, but at uncertain hours. Perhaps it will be well to make known to the public the fact that the lower door sticks sometimes, and needs a vigorous push to open it. That is the reason that persons have sometimes gone away thinking they could not get in, when the secretary was actually in attendance.

But though it is true that the office is not always open, it is not a few hours, and it is quite safe to tell an applicant at the door that the best time to come is between nine and ten in the forenoon. In my next communication to the GRAPHIC I will give some instances of the results of investigation in such cases.

The reputation of beggary and fraud, then, with all the time, postage and care it takes to make investigations, is one thing done by the Associated Charities for the money it asks.

The finding of employment for those who need it, and of competent workers for those who need them, is another branch of the work, costing, for time, for record books, and for postage a considerable portion of the income of the society. This is a pleasant work than the last, inasmuch as it is constructive rather than repressive.

The Penny Savings System, which also does important constructive work, is another source of expenditure. The original supply of stock cost nearly a hundred dollars. What has been done by Mr. Albert Metcalf of West Newton, treasurer of the system, who, as yet, has sent in no bill. The agents at different stations are expected to pay cash for the first instalment of stamps, and as in many cases, this is a great deal to ask in addition to the time and trouble necessary to carry on a station, certain philanthropic persons have come forward in some instances, and advanced the requisite amount of money. Mrs. Horace Dutton and Mr. P. A. McVicar have done this for the station in Auburndale, which does the largest business of any in the city.

Newtonville comes next, started by Mr. H. H. Carter. Newton is third, the money to start it being supplied by Mr. Gordon, the agent. Miss Wall and Miss Lovely of the Lincoln school are using their own money, and doing a great work in training their pupils to a practical knowledge of the value of money. An agency in one of the rooms of the Hyde school was started by Mr. Seward Jones of the Highlands. The station at Thompsonville is sustained by the Baptist church at Newton Centre, and Mrs. Charles A. Garey of that place advanced the money for the girls of her sewing school, who are using the stamps. The late B. F. Houghton of West Newton carried a large amount of stamps, at his own expense, and was doing great good in a locality where just such an influence was needed. It is greatly to be regretted that no agency now exists in West Newton, owing to the difficulty of finding a person, properly situated, and willing, to take the time and trouble to act as agent.

The work of the Provident Branch comes under the head of direct relief, as it distributes clothing, mostly second hand, and even when selling it, does it at a price so low, as to make it really charitable work. It has in times past taken a disproportionate amount of the secretary's time, but this is now obviated by the volunteer labor of a committee of ladies. Mrs. Morehouse of Newtonville, Miss Jones of Miss Bigelow of Newton, one or more of whom spends every Tuesday forenoon and Saturday at the office. This work costs but little money, especially since Mr. Merry and Mr. Simon White of Newtonville have both kindly offered to do the necessary expressing without charge.

Of course, where there is an office there must be rent and fuel, and some service. A large correspondence necessitates some expenditures for stationery and postage. It would not be possible for so much and so varied work to be done without the whole time given to it, of at least, one person, who must, consequently, be paid.

I hope this lengthy communication has sufficiently answered the question with which it began.

There has been some solicitation for the Associated Charities, and the directors had no previous knowledge. It is probable that the money so raised has all been turned into the treasury, but it has been thought best to ask the churches each to have an authorized collector to raise the money for this purpose in its own parish.

It is hoped that a sufficient amount may be raised before the summer migrations begin. Contributions may be sent directly to the Treasurer, Mr. Warren P. Tyler, 78 Sargent street, Newton.

THE RULE OF THE ROAD.

The rule of the road in old England has always been "Keep to the left." In New England, almost as soon as it was settled, the rule of the road came to be "Keep to the right," which is now the universal practice in this country. The change could hardly have been merely arbitrary, says the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle. English colonists would not have taken the trouble to break themselves of the habit that had become instinctive except for some good reason. As to what that reason was there recently has been considerable newspaper discussion without any particular valuable outcome. That it is to be found in something in the new environment seems apparent. That it was the difference between old England's roads and New England's roads is likely. A driver, in order to have the free use of his right arm, must sit to the right. He has his right fore hub under his eye, while he cannot see his left fore hub, and, therefore, can drive more safely if objects with which his wheels must not collide and which must be passed closely are kept on his right. On the broad, level, and crowded highways of old England these objects were, most frequently, the wheels of other vehicles going in the opposite direction. To keep the contiguous and opposed hubs under his eye the driver naturally kept to the left. On the narrow wood paths of New England these objects were the stumps, trees, rocks and holes on either side. A man might drive for miles on one of these roads without meeting other vehicles. He did not have to take them into consideration. In order to avoid the obstructions on one side of the narrow road he must drive constantly close to the side that he could most readily see, the right. In the rare event of meeting another vehicle he must pull off the narrow road altogether. The reason for keeping to the right would now be stronger than ever. He would not be likely to follow the old rule, pull across the road and plunge his unseen left hubs into unknown dangers. That is the most probable explanation of the American rule of the road. The reason has practically ceased to exist, and so has been forgotten. The conditions now are the same here as they were and are in England. The left fore hubs of vehicles coming in the opposite direction are what a driver is most frequently called upon to pass closely. Keeping to the right, he cannot see either his own hub or the hub with which it is liable to collide as they pass each other. That is why the reasonableness of the American rule of the road is now called in question.

Literary Notes.

Benefits Forgiven, the striking novel of American life, by Volney Balesar, which has attracted so much attention during its publication in the Century Magazine, is to be published immediately by D. Appleton & Co.

Mrs. Alexander, the author of The Woeing O'it, has recently completed a new novel called A Ward in Chancery, which is to appear at once in Appleton's Town and Country Library.

A new novel by Dr. Georg Ebers, entitled Cleopatra, is in the press of D. Appleton & Co., the publishers of Dr. Ebers's works in this country.

An obedience to the simple laws of hygiene and the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla will enable the most delicate man or sickly woman to pass in ease and safety from the icy atmosphere of February to the warm, moist days of April. It is the best of spring medicines.

A LIVING MUMMY.

A Traveler Tells of One He Found in an Egyptian Domicile.

"We went into the hut after some hesitation—the dragoman whispered there were ladies there—and found a vigorous old man, telling his Mussulman beads cross-legged on a mud bench, and on the floor bent over the fire the oldest looking human being I ever saw alive.

"Mummies I have seen, and wondered not that they were dead, but in what part of her withered, desiccated frame that old woman found space to keep the stern vital energies that lined her grim, carved face I can scarcely guess. She looked no more living than seaweed does, dried and stretched on paper. Her arms, her legs—thrust almost into the fire—were so shrunk that the long leathern flesh and flaccid muscles hung round them like dangling shreds on sticks.

"Round her neck were beads of wood, and round her wrists leathern bracelets—though, to be sure, I cannot feel certain they were not folds of skin—and on her face lurked not only lines, but gullies and passages, they seemed so deep and fallen. But for the occasional upturned glance of her cold, unquenching eye I could not have supposed her anything else than one of the remotest queens of Egypt.

"The old man gave us a lusty welcome and sent for milk and dates and filled our pockets. He showed us his long spear that hung against the wall and told me with a proud gesture that he had often killed his man, but more often with a sword, and taking me by the shoulder showed me fiercely how he used to do it. He was 90 years old and had never been farther from home than Assuan, and then only once.

"All his sons sat and stood round us, and in the background against the mud granary white teeth glimmered and the broad, black faces of the women shone. I asked him what present he would like, and he asked for a little rice and a little coffee. All the time he clutched and fingered his Muslim rosary, which, when I admired, he wanted me to accept. The son came back with us to the dahab and carried off the coffee and rice in envelopes, to which I added a handful of cigarettes and a couple of oranges, with particular injunctions that one was to be given to the old gentleman."—Cornhill Magazine.

SHOOTING HONKERS.

GREAT SPORT WHICH IS FOUND IN THE NORTHWEST.

Countless Swarms Which Congregate Between the Red River Valley and the Mississippi—Shooting Does Not Appear to Diminish Their Number.

Wild goose hunting on the plains of the northwest is a sport which always has great charm even for the experienced Nimrod. It is a sport replete with incident and a recreation which must once be indulged in to be thoroughly appreciated. The wild goose is known in all parts of North America, but in no section of the country does this bird appear in such numbers as in that territory lying between the Red river valley and the Missouri river. There the geese swarm in countless numbers and become corpulent on the grains of No. 1 hard which have been shaken from the stalk by the reaper and are lying in the stubble everywhere. Large numbers of the birds are killed by resident hunters and for eastern markets, but no apparent diminution is noticeable in the size and number of the flocks to be seen when the shooting season begins each year.

An hour's lively sport with the honkers on the wheatfields of North Dakota means but one thing to the inexperienced hunter, and that is something for his pains, especially if he happens to get in a well concealed stand directly in the line of flight. Then it is nothing uncommon for him to "tumble over" a wagon load of geese in very short order. Wild geese are a staple commodity in North Dakota and readily bring from $2.50 to $3 per dozen during the shooting season. In the little towns and stations along the Northern Pacific railway, during the fall and spring flights, almost everybody turns out for a few hours in the morning and toward the close of the day to shoot at the geese, and a right warm reception are the birds treated to. Many will ride to the outskirts of the town and shoot from a buggy or wagon at the passing myriads overhead and occasionally bring down a bird at long range.

The hunter who is out for business and is shooting for market and the money there is in it drives out 10 or 15 miles over the prairie several hours before daylight, and after selecting a spot where the geese have been seen in great numbers the day before digs a pit in the ground large enough to conceal himself and arranges the stubble or grass about the mouth of it so as to present a natural appearance. Close by he plants his decoys and settles back in the pit and anxiously awaits the coming of the morning. It is still dark, but from every quarter of the prairie come sounds of animal life which foretell the coming of a new day. The mournful cry of the curlew is heard overhead, and a flock of plovers demonstrate their close proximity by the hurrying noise of their wings.

For some time he sits in a cramped position, listening to the booming notes of a prairie chicken, which bird is pouring forth a volume of drumlike sounds. The sharp yelp of a coyote not far away is unmistakable evidence that that thriving, skulking animal has jumped up a cotton tail and is hustling for an early breakfast. At the first peeping of the gray dawn the hunter suddenly hears a welcome sound—the faint and faraway honk-honk of the geese. He examines his gun and notes the direction of the sound. Nearer and nearer the sound comes, and finally he ventures to take a peep out of the pit and discovers the distant outlines of a large flock spread out V shaped in the morning sky, bearing off to one side. Apparently they have not seen the decoys, and the hunter thinks it is yet too dark. Suddenly the leader is seen to waver, and with loud cries the flock turns and circles around the decoys as if suspicious of their genuineness, but drawing nearer at each turn. They have approached within easy shooting distance, and just as soon as the flock pitches down among the decoys the loud bang! bang! of a heavily loaded shotgun is heard, and two puffs of smoke are seen coming apparently from the surface of the earth a short distance away. Several geese are lying on the ground, and one is skimming away over the prairie with a tipped wing.

Some other flocks appear, and the shooting becomes lively until the sun is fully two hours high, when the flocks diminish, both in size and number, and with the exception of a few stragglers the morning flight is over. Crystal Springs is the name of a small station on the Northern Pacific, 30 miles west of Jamestown, N. D. There are several small alkali lakes in close proximity to the station and a number of springs in the hills near by, from which the place gained its name. The town proper consists of a depot, boarding house and water tank and a population not exceeding 10 souls. One April morning a few years or so since the writer, in company with the telegraph operator at the place, sallied forth in quest of geese, large flocks of which were seen circling around and alighting on a small lake, fringed with bushes and tall grass, not over a mile from the station. After a full hour spent in crawling over the ground and keeping out of sight as much as possible the hunters crept through the grass to the bushes and looked cautiously out.

Upward of 1,000 geese were sporting on the water, diving, squawking and carrying on at a great rate. When the edge of the flock had come within 30 yards the hunters raised their guns and gave them a barrel, following it up with the remaining barrel as they rose heavily from the water. Twenty-eight geese were gathered up as the result of the shot, 24 of them the white or brant geese. The remaining four were fine specimens of that wariest of all birds of its species—the blackhead or Canada goose. The morning's work was highly satisfactory.—Cleveland Leader.

TO RESIST THE ATTACK—of the germs of Consumption, Scrofula, Grip, Malaria, and many other diseases—means fight or die for all of us. These germs are everywhere in the air we breathe. The odds are in favor of the germs, if our liver is inactive and our blood impure.

What is needed most is an increase in our germ-fighting strength. To do this successfully you need to put on healthy flesh, rouse the liver to vigorous action, so it will throw off these germs, and purify the blood so that there will be no "weak spot," nor soil for germ-growth.

We claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, that it does all this in a way peculiar to itself. It is the development of generations of medical thought—it has stood the test of a quarter of a century of cures.

That is why the makers can guarantee it. In every trouble caused by torpid liver or impure blood, if the "Discovery" fails to benefit or cure, your money is refunded.

There wouldn't be any cases of Chronic Catarrh if everyone used Dr. Sage's Remedy. There's $500 reward for an incurable case.

PARK THEATRE—That inimitable comedian, William Barry, has secured a new play from the pen of William Gill, that he will offer the patrons of the Park Theatre next week. It is called "The Rising Generation." The plot is carried out by two groups of persons—one in the humble walks of life, the other in a higher sphere, the representatives being the families of McShayne and Van Tyke.
 The head of the former is an acquiescent employee, and that of the latter a wealthy merchant. McShayne obtains a valuable contract which puts him on the high road to prosperity, and he eventually accumulates great wealth, and becomes a mover in the politics of the city and State. Van Tyke, the merchant, who lives on Upper Fifth Avenue in a palatial mansion facing the shanty where Mc-Shayne begins his career, has a son who has every advantage that wealth can furnish, but the young man squanders his father's money and leads an altogether disreputable life. The comedian brings with him this season a company of twenty-five comedians, singers and dancers, and a car load of scenery depicting different points of interest in the metropolis which will be eventually burned. The verdict of New York critics regarding the production was, that Barry was funny, the play was funny,
 the company excellent, the scenery grand, and the entire entertainment one of novelty and laughter from beginning to end. The engagement will last but one week, with the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

COLUMBIA THEATRE—The last week of "Charley's Aunt" at the Columbia has arrived, and it will be with grief that many people will learn of this fact. On Saturday night, March 8, the charming old lady will hold her last reception and it will undoubtedly be an occasion when the theatre will be crowded to the doors.
 During the nine weeks of the stay of this play she has made herself most popular, and has made many friends who would welcome a much longer stay on her part. The announcement of the closing performances has made the advance sale something enormous, for it seems as if everyone was bent on witnesses the brilliant comedy at least once or twice more. Its success has been phenomenal. The value of the piece may be shown from the fact that it is now being played in five different languages, and in seven of the largest cities. Boston indorsed it thoroughly and will be sorry to lose it.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—"Sheridan, or the Maid of Bath," the new play which Mr. E. H. Sothern is presenting at the Hollis, will be continued for another week. It is a novel quite distinct from anything in which this talented young comedian has been seen as yet. The character Mr. Sothern assumes is that of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, of whom history tells us that as an orator he swayed the English Parliament at the will of his peerless eloquence. As an author he wrote the best English comedies since the days of Shakespeare. As a lover he won the Maid of Bath with the price of his sword and the persuasiveness of his tongue. Some of these facts are used for the action of the present play, and the persons known to have shared in them are brought forward as the characters of the present production. The scene of the play is at Bath, the social centre of England one hundred years ago, and the surroundings are in exquisite taste. The scenic appointments and costumes illustrate England in the period of her gaiety and most gallant humor, and Mr. Sothern's persistent effort has been to have them as thoroughly correct as are the facts which are the foundation of his new play.

TREMONT THEATRE—Next week, Feb.
 26, the two admirable players, thoroughly skilled in their art, Robert Hillard and Paul Arthur, will present their new play,
 "The Sleep Walker," at the Tremont Theatre for one week only. The story of the play starts in a London flat occupied by Jack Pointer, a well-to-do young gentleman, who has for neighbors overhead his uncle, Major Blister of the militia, and family, consisting of twin sons, the John and James, and one daughter,
 Sophia, who is Jack's affianced wife.
 By a covenant in his father's will, if Jack should give his hand in marriage to any but the fair Sophia, he is to lose a nice little mill. Jack and Sophia, however, agree to love where they like and not where they are directed. Jack falls over head and ears in love with the charming young widow, Mrs. Harkaway, while Sophia bestows her affections upon Jack's college chum, the clever young artist, Herward. Jack has arranged a secret meeting in the rooming house of a lovely widow, adopting all possible means against intrusion and interruption. But he has reckoned without the Major and "them twins," who put in an appearance. Jack, to put them on the wrong track, pretended to be a sleepwalker. To keep up the deception he is compelled to wear a mask and make practical jokes of the somnambulist order. Jack's widow, it appears, has promised her hand to a meek and mild curate. Indeed, she has gone through the ceremony of marriage with him, leaving him at the altar, however, when his first wife, supposed to be dead, turned up very much alive. One of the funniest things in the piece is the fact that the meek and mild curate is another college chum of Jack's and that he is the very man selected to perform the marriage ceremony between Jack and Mrs. Harkaway. The course of the remainder of the story has already been traced, and it is only necessary to say that the fun is sustained by means, more or less extravagant, until the end.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—Manager Dexter of the Boston Grand Opera House has the past few weeks received from many people requests that "Rosedale" be again presented this season with the stock company in the cast. Several of these requests have come from suburbanities, and the management of the Opera House is desirous of pleasing its patrons, it has decided to again play
 "Rosedale," and on next Monday evening the curtain will rise upon an elaborate revival of the piece. Since the decision to play Lester Wallace's famous military drama, scenic artists and carpenters have been working night and day preparing new scenery, and on Monday evening the audience which gathers at the Opera House will witness by far the most elaborate production given the piece since the days of the famous author. The cast in important characters, and the remainder of the cast with exceptions. Miss Isabelle Evesson will impersonate the role of charming Rose Leigh for the first time in Boston on this occasion. Howard Gould, the new comer, will play Matthew Leigh.
 Joseph Haworth returns to the role of Col. Eliot Grey, Miss Annie Clarke to the role of Mrs. Florence May, Miss Kate Ryan to Tabitha Stock, Miss Helen Dayne, to Sarah Sykes, Frank J. Keenan to Miles McKenna, Mark Price to Col.
 Cavendish May, little Olive Smith to Sir Arthur May, Miss Belle Stokes to Lady Adela Grey, and all the other roles will be assumed by prominent members of the stock company.

Newton Men on the Herald.

In a recent issue of the Boston Sunday Post a very interesting "write up" on the Boston Herald spoke of several Newton young men who are connected with the Herald. It said of Mr. H. S. Kempton of Newtonville:
 "Mr. H. S. Kempton looks out for everything in the line of telegraphic service outside of cablegrams. Of course this is an important position as there is in the service, and requires a man who doesn't often slip up." Mr. Holmes knew that Mr. Kempton was just the man for this job, for he has seen nearly thirty years of service for the Herald, and he filled almost every place in the office.
 Mr. Kempton has got a long memory and he remembers his correspondent who does a rattling news story as far as he does the man who gets scooped. He believes in encouraging those who try to do conscientious work, but he is death on a "fakir." On the walls of his room hang maps of New England and railroad diagrams. He knows just where to tap when it's time for news sap to run. His cakes of news sugar may not be so large as some other papers by the time they have been pressed into form at the Herald office, but it's seldom he has to take any of it back as last year's product.
 He would rather a man should be conservative than merely enterprising. Mr.
 Kempton also handles correspondent
 letters.

The article said of Mr. John Cutler:
 "When Mr. Kempton is away his work is done by Mr. John Cutler, who ordinarily spends his time in handling communications which appear headed "To the editor of the Herald." I for one know to have dealt with 28,174 Pro Bono Pub-licos, and over 13,000 folks belonging to the Veritas society since he began keeping tab. Sometimes he and the business troubles men fall on each others' neck and hold a consolation meeting."

The article said of Mr. Whitmore as follows:
 "Mr. Henry Whitmore is in charge of the real estate department, after several years of general work. He began as a boy in the office, and though he has steadily climbed the rounds of the Herald, he now finds himself on the ground.

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands can testify.
 Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but many, if not most, of the remedies in general use afford but temporary relief. A cure certainly cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes. Ely's Cream Balan, which so highly commended, is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power, with perfect safety and pleasantness to the patient.
 The druggists all sell it.

The store, now occupied by him in Farnham's block, is being negotiated for by a Boston man who wishes to put in a hardware store and plumbing shop.

—The reception by the students of the Newton Baptist Theological Institution on Wednesday evening was one of the most successful ever given and it was attended by nearly 300 ladies and gentlemen. The students received their guests in Colby hall which was very prettily decorated for the occasion and from 8 until 11 o'clock the rooms were filled. A male quartet furnished music during the evening and the usual social festivities obtained. An orchestra rendered selections during the evening. The decorations of the dining hall in Sturtevant hall where the collation was served were especially fine.

—The Christian Endeavor Society had a very interesting meeting last Sunday evening at the Congregational church and there was a large attendance. The topic, "For What Does our Denomination Stand," was introduced by Rev. Dr. Furber who explained wherein Congregationalism differed from other denominations. Rev. Dr. Dunning gave a brief sketch of the primal days of Congregationalism and Mrs. Whipple read that beautiful hymn, "The Breaking Waves of the Sea." From the pen of a Congregationalist, Rev. Mr. Cobb defined the past four centuries in their reference to the topic. The 16th, Martin Luther; 17th, Emigration; 18th, Apaty; 19th, Triumph; the whole of the last century in reference to the substance of his remarks. Five minute talks by members followed.

Edward Ingersoll, who was for a long term assigned to duty at the Springfield Arsenal. He had no children. Mr. Wilder was a member of the Algonquin, Country and Art clubs, the Athletic Association and the New York Club of New York. He was, in quiet ways, an exceedingly charitable man, his good deeds being numerous, but done in a modest manner. Many a needy person will remember him affectionately, and among his friends the memory of his kindly presence will long be treasured. The funeral was held at Emmanuel church, Boston, Tuesday, and among Newton men present were Mr. A.

—The Great Vaudeville entertainment last evening at Associates Hall, under the auspices of the N. C. I. A., was a perfect success. It was largely in the line of burlesque. The band was superb, and lively and energetic. The acts were numerous, and nearly as large as cabbages. Characters were finely personified by Mrs. Whipple; she was called back by an encore and gave a recitation which was much applauded. Graceful dancing by two ladies was much enjoyed, and there was no confusion of colors in their dresses to distract attention. The Humen Calline gave evidence that the world does move. The entertainment closed with a laughable street scene. The attendance was very large.

—A very pleasant event took place last Friday evening on Lyman street when Past Noble Grand George B. Sherman was surprised by a party of friends on his 55th anniversary and presented with a handsome easy chair. The party consisted of past grands from Home Lodge, L. O. O. F., members of Canton, Abraham Lincoln of Boston and Garden City encampment of Newtonville and members of the Daughters of Rebekah, with all of which the victim is prominently connected. Mr. Sherman's surprise was complete and he was escorted down stairs by the past grands, where he was presented with the elegant chair by P. N. Grands, Al. Roach and Arthur Mulson. Ice cream, cake and coffee were served by the Rebekahs and the social festivities and the gentlemen then enjoyed a "smoke talk." Mr. Sherman is one of the four charter members living, out of the twenty-four who started Home Lodge on April 3, 1873, and all of the survivors are past grands. The other three are Amos L. Hale and Edwin Hurd of Upper Falls and Geo. Gould of Newton Centre. Mr. Sherman was the first person vice-grand and the second noble grand of Home Lodge. They were cut down 10 per cent a few weeks ago and accepted the reduction rather than remain out of work, but this last proposition is more than they feel like submitting to. They get 6 cents a flat and work by the piece. It is proposed to pay them but 5 cents a flat.

—Mr. James H. Barnard died Monday morning at his home on Rockland place. The deceased was one of the older residents of this place and was widely known as a machinist of great skill and ingenuity. For 26 years he was a valued employee of Grover & Baker, the sewing machine company formerly doing business on Tremont street, Boston. He then held a position with the Hancock Inspector Co. for a number of years, being in charge of their most important work. While here he was taken seriously ill, remaining so for nearly three years, during one-half of which time the company continued his salary, so valuable a man did they consider him. He lost his wife 11 years ago, and leaves one daughter, Miss Lizzie Barnard. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock yesterday. Rev. Nathaniel Fellows officiating. The attendance was very large and the floral tributes were many and beautiful. The interment was at the Newton cemetery.

GLASGOW WAYS.

Points That Interest an American in the Scotch Metropolis.

"Let me take you tomorrow to see our municipal buildings, and you will see a palace which cost several millions of your dollars, of which sum not a sixpence was stolen nor jobbed," remarked a Glasgow baillie to a Boston Herald correspondent, who was his guest.

Next morning I went to the municipal buildings—what we would call the city hall, writes this correspondent. I found the place no less palatial than it had been described to me. It is far and away the most beautiful building of the kind I have ever seen. Its marbles, its stairways, its reception rooms, are exceedingly beautiful; its business rooms are in admirable taste. The building is the palace of a king—King Demos—and no crowned colleague has a lovelier dwelling.

There were no loafers in the halls; no large jawed politicians were holding up the exquisite iron gates; no office seekers were sprinkling the yard with strong language and tobacco juice; the place was more than respectable—it was attractive.

In this palace of King Demos there are state apartments most richly bedecked: there are a drawing room, a danceroom, a banquet room, and I know not what, and these apartments are used on festive occasions when official citydom is expected to disport itself to the credit of the community—which latter by one, two, three, four or more thousand representatives comes to join in the gayety.

The mayor of Glasgow is called the lord provost. He is chosen for three years at nothing a year. He is expected to live in some state and hospitality and to uphold the gentle dignity of the town. It costs him from $10,000 to $15,000 or $20,000 annually to do this, as circumstances serve. Obviously it is easier for a rich man than it is for a poor man to enter the provostship of Glasgow. But the Glaswegians propose that if the camel be not available, then shall not the rich man have it all his own way. They talk now of endowing the provostship, so that the sums necessarily spent upon splendor may henceforth come from the public purse. But they do not propose to give the lord provost a salary. His services must be gratuitous as before.

Glasgow is a solid looking town. Every building is of stone, after the Scotch way. One rarely sees brick in Scotland. The ribs of the hills are dug out for building withal, so that a Scotch town seems built to endure. Wherever you go you find stone stairs in the buildings of Glasgow.

The difference between British building and American is not more marked than in this matter of stone stairways and brick partition walls—dwelling houses, I mean, as well as warehouses.

Deeming it necessary to prevent the construction of sky cleaving buildings, which shut out light, air and everything but ugliness, the Glasgow folk enacted a law that no building shall be higher than the width of the street on which it fronts. You can build a mile high if you have a thoroughfare as wide as that.

A capital thing they have in Glasgow which we have not. The municipality has constructed a number of bath-houses, fitted with huge white tiled swimming tanks, each holding from 80,000 to 100,000 gallons of water. The water is kept at a temperature of 70 degrees. These baths are open day and evening throughout the year. The admission to these baths is 4 cents per person. Half a million bathers use these tanks in a year. Connected with the bath buildings are washhouses where workmen's wives do their family laundry work, having for a charge of 5 cents per hour the use of a washing stall with hot and cold water and steam drying appliances.

Heliotropism.

Heliotropism is the peculiar property shown by many plants, notably the sunflower, of always turning toward the sun. In the case of seedlings the phenomenon is especially marked. The cells on the light side are apparently retarded in growth, thus causing a curvature toward that side. Professor Romanes has experimented with an intermittent light, such as that of an electric spark discharge, upon mustard seedlings, and has found that the heliotrop effect produced in this way is far greater than that caused by the sun or any other form of light. Strange to say, however, this abnormal influence is unaccompanied by the generation of phlorophyll, the green coloring matter in plants which requires sunshine for its proper production.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Photographs Report Better Than Eyes.

At a meeting of the Academie des Sciences, Paris, M. Zenger exhibited two photographs which he had taken at midnight from his window, looking on the lake of Geneva and Mont Blanc. The lake and the mountain are feebly imaged on the plates, although they were both quite invisible to the eye in the darkness. It is well known that many stars, invisible to the eye, are revealed on the photographic plate, and some years ago an advertisement on the hull of the Great Eastern, at Birkenhead, which had been tarred over so as to be invisible, was quite legible in a photograph which had been taken of the vessel.—London Globe.

Modest Abbe Delille.

It is said that the French Abbe Delille once had in his household a very quick tempered relative, with whom he sometimes had animated disputes and who sometimes went so far as to throw books at the abbe. The abbe must have been a person of great amiability and self control. Once, when a particularly large and heavy volume was thrown at him, he caught it gracefully and said: "My dear friend, I must beg of you to remember that I prefer smaller gifts."—New York Mail and Express.
